THE KNOW-SOMETHINGS.

Organization of the "Republican Americans," or Know-Somethings, at Cleveland.

INITIATORY PROCEEDINGS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

CLEVELAND, Wednesday, June 13.

The "Know-Somethings," or Anti-Slavery branch of the Know-Nothing party, met in this city to-day. Every Free State seems to be fully represented. Among the delegates from New-York I notice Messrs. MORGAN, BRYDGES and H. THOMPSON, of your City; SAMPSON and VAN VOORHIS, of Rochester, and RICHARDSON, of Albany. CHAS. W. SLOAN and ex-Governor BOTTWELL, with thirty other delegates, represent Massachusetts. The Convention met at 10 o'clock this morning, and was organized by the election of C. W. SLOAN, of Boston, as temporary Chairman, and Messrs. BURR, of Ohio, and BARNES, of Michigan, as Secretaries.

After the appointment of a Committee on Credentials, the Convention was permanently organized by the election of Hon. Mr. BRYDGES, of Rochester, Member of the Assembly of your State, as President, with three Vice Presidents and three Secretaries.

Kansas is represented.

A Committee of nine were appointed to draft resolutions for the union of the Convention, and consisting of the following gentlemen:

E. McMULLEN	New-York.
E. D. BANGSON	Massachusetts.
Gen. T. W. WOOD	Rhode Island.
—— JOHNSON	Pennsylvania.
J. C. VANDRAN	Ohio.
Y. SELVE HOBART	Michigan.
H. W. CLARK	Indiana.
N. C. GREEN	Illinois.
J. E. BENGREN	Wisconsin.

I learn that the Committee will report to-day; and, unless I am misinformed, the party platform they intend to recommend will embrace:

1. Distinct and determined hostility to the encroachments of Slavery.

2. A demand for the restoration of the Missouri Compromise.

3. Internal improvements under the authority of the General Government.

4. Protection to American industry.

The question of Temperance will be left to the action of the individual States.

Governor WILSON and a large number of the Philadelphia delegates are hourly expected. The Anti-Slavery Know-Nothings are well represented, and openly declare that they have lost all confidence in the BAKERS and ULLMANS Proscriptionists, and that they will not countenance the Silver Gray toadyism of Slavery to which, under their lead, the party has been so extensively prostituted.

Yours, &c.

THE KNOW-NOTHING CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the National Council at Philadelphia.

EXCITING EVENING SESSION.

Pro-Slavery Platform Adopted.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 13.

At noon to-day the American National Council was again as far from any unity of sentiment on the position the Order should assume on the question of Slavery, as when it was first organized. As you were informed by telegraph last night, a proposition was made by Mr. ELLIS, of the District of Columbia, during the evening, in effect suggesting that the Order, on the question of the admission of new States, declare in favor of the admission to the Union of no State with Slavery North of 36° 30', and in favor of the admission of States South of that line either with or without Slavery, as the inhabitants may choose.

This proposition had previously been stated to many of the delegates, and a number of them, from both North and South, viewed it it as the proposition on which they could all agree, and with it settle the matter so far as the Order was interested. But when it was brought forward in Council, there was opposition where none had been anticipated. Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky and North Carolina were satisfied. So was New-York, or nearly so, although it was an important modification of the platform reported on Monday, which platform was drawn by New-York men, inside and outside of the Council.

Southern extremists, however, refused to give it their support, and they were soon followed by Northern delegates, who declared that if that proposition would not do, nothing but a repeal of the Kansas Nebraska bill and entire restoration of the Missouri Compromise would meet their approval. Some insisted upon a declaration in favor of repealing the Fugitive Slave law, as the only means of securing success to the Order at the North. So the proposition from which so much had been expected, failed entirely.

The remainder of the evening session was spent in desultory discussion of the Slavery question. And, again this morning, the same course was pursued, and thus far (8 P. M.) without result.

Soon after the Council gathered this morning Mr. JENNINGS, of Illinois, made a strong Abolition speech, which, in consequence of his excited manner and the extravagance of his views, produced but little effect—certainly none that was beneficial.

He was followed by Mr. DUBREUL, of Virginia, who took opposite ground—as least he is supposed to have intended to do so, but some five or six of those I have seen who heard him, failed to discover his exact position on the subject under discussion, notwithstanding he occupied the floor more than an hour and a half.

He was followed by Mr. RAYNOR, of North Carolina, who is said by all parties to have made one of the best speeches yet uttered in the Council. Mr. RAYNOR was eloquent in his appeals to the South to continue in a mild and conciliatory spirit, and begged of the North to exhibit a disposition to arrive at some safe and just compromise on the subject. He said, and correctly too, that unless there was a united desire to leave the extremes of the Slavery question, a union of the North and South on any platform would be of no avail. This is just what all parties agree in true; yet the Northern delegates claim that as all the concessions heretofore made have been made by the people of the North, it is now only just that the South should evidence the sincerity of its desire for the union and harmony of all the States by doing as the North has so often done before.

Mr. RAYNOR, at the close of his remarks, presented a series of conciliatory resolutions, which, however, were not adopted.

Mr. RAYNOR's resolutions were, in substance, condemnatory of the course of Southern men, enemies of the Order, who are straining to make it appear an Anti-Slavery organization, and also condemning the Northern enemies, who are endeavoring to make it appear an advocate of Slavery. They would leave the subject of Slavery where the Constitution leaves it, so far as the Order is concerned—leaving the States, North and South, to make their own issues upon it.

The following are the majority resolutions:

Resolved, That the American party, having arisen upon the ruins and in spite of the opposition of the Whig and Democratic parties, cannot be held in any manner responsible for the shameless acts or violated pledges of either; that the systematic agitation of the Slavery question by those parties has elevated sectional hostility into a positive element of political power, and brought our institutions into peril. It has therefore become the imperative duty of the American party to interpose, for the purpose of giving peace to the country and perpetuity to the Union. This we can only do as shown if is impossible to reconcile opinions so extreme as those which separate the disputants, and as there can be no dishonor in submitting to the laws, the National Council has deemed it the best guarantee of common justice and of future peace to abide by and maintain the existing laws upon the subject of Slavery, as a final and conclusive settlement of that subject in spirit and in substance.

Resolved, That regarding it the highest duty to avow these opinions upon a subject so important, in distinct and unequivocal terms, it is hereby declared, as the sense of this National Council, that Congress possesses no power under the Constitution to legislate upon the subject of Slavery in the States, or to exclude any State from admission into the Union because her Constitution does or does not recognize the institution of Slavery as a part of her social system, and expressly prohibiting any expressions of opinion upon the power of Congress to establish or prohibit Slavery in any Territory. It is the sense of this National Council that Congress ought not to legislate upon the subject of Slavery within the Territories of the United States, and that any interference of Congress with Slavery as it exists in the District of Columbia would be a violation of the spirit and intention of the compact by which the State of Maryland ceded the District to the United States, and a breach of the National Faith.

The minority resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That the repeal of the Missouri Compromise was an infraction of the plighted faith of the Nation, and that it should be restored, and if efforts to that end shall fail, Congress should refuse to admit any State tolerating Slavery which shall be formed out of any portion of the Territory from which that institution was excluded by that Compromise.

Those who were heretofore hopeful of uniting the Order, by some medium course on this subject, are now despairing. Souring from the South a mild tone and conciliatory disposition has not produced the desired effect. The Free-Soil sentiment of the North is now as firm in its demands, and its representatives as unyielding, as ever were Southern principles and Southern men. There are, of course, some exceptions among Northern delegates. But, so firm a stand on the part of Free-Soil advocates was not dreamed of—certainly if the South, or any important portion of it, could be induced to moderation.

The next step, I am assured, that will be taken by those most interested in the Order's success, will be to attempt the construction of a platform in which no Slavery or Anti-Slavery plank shall appear. There is a distant hope that in another action matters would assume unity, and that the principles peculiar to the Order would thus prove a sufficient platform. Neither North nor South wants to collide with such a platform. They are each too much interested in the subject; of Slavery to leave it entirely with chance. What may finally be agreed upon cannot now be known. The prospect now is that they will only agree to disagree.

Governor GARDNER, of Massachusetts, returned to Boston to-day. Whether on account of a pressure of official business, or because he has given up hope of a union of the Order, I am not informed.

Proceedings of the Afternoon Session.

[BY MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.]

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 13.

At the opening of the afternoon session Col. WILLIAMS, of Kentucky, addressed the Council for an hour in favor of the majority Report of the Committee, presented last Monday. He was followed by Governor JOHNSTON, of Pennsylvania, in favor of the minority Report.

His arguments were forcible, his points well taken. Although in favored of the Report, he was willing to accede something for the sake of harmony, though he was anxious for the restoration of the Missouri Compromise.

The next speaker was Mr. PRICE, of Kentucky. He favored a restoration of the Missouri Compromise. This would cause agitation on the subject to cease. Next arose Mr. PECK, of Maine, also in favor of repealing the Missouri Compromise. He occupied about fifteen minutes time and spoke with good effect.

Mr. MCCALL, of Texas, expressed his sentiments in favor of a restoration of the Compromise.

Mr. BOOTH, of Conn., spoke next; and in opposition to the majority report. He objected to the declaration that Congress has no right to interfere in the subject of Slavery, but was conciliatory. He wished, if possible, that a platform might so be constructed as that all could stand upon it with consistency.

Mr. DEARMAN, of N. J., followed in favor of a restoration of the Compromise, but was willing to ignore the subject of Slavery rather than go without a platform.

Mr. BARKER, of N. Y., (late President of the National Council) followed. He said, in substance, that he was with the Order at its commencement; that then the subject of Slavery did not form any part of its creed, and he hoped the subject would not now cause embarrassment among its members.

The session now adjourned to 6 o'clock or later. At 10 a vote on the several propositions now before the Council will be taken.

Judge CONE, of Georgia, Chairman of the Platform Committee, is down for the closing speech.

EVENING SESSION.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 14—1 A. M.

The Convention has passed a terrible night. Orimination and recrimination have been the order of the night. After a desperate struggle a vote was reached on the majority report of the Platform Committee, and, as I am, I believe, credibly informed, it was carried.

QUARTER PAST 1 A. M.—The American National Convention has this moment adjourned. The speeches during the night were numerous, and many of them pithy. Although the excitement was intense, good order was preserved, and never adjournment the following votes had been obtained:

In favor of majority report of Committee on Platform, ninety; against it, fifty-nine.

In favor of the minority report, fifty-one; opposed, ninety-two.

In favor of Mr. RAYNOR's proposition, sixty-four; opposed, ninety-seven.

The Convention adjourned until 9 A. M., when the resignation of secrecy will probably be removed.

A Stormy Debate in the Know-Nothing Convention.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 13.

The KNOW-Nothing Convention has had a stormy debate nearly the entire day. The majority report of the Committee on resolutions, discussing the Slavery question, was under discussion during the morning, and a motion to close the debate at noon was made and carried. Subsequently, the time of closing the debate was extended to 10 o'clock to night, when the vote may, perhaps, be taken.

General Condition of Ireland—Steady Progress in all Departments.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

DUBLIN, Friday, June 1, 1855.

Late and copious rains—notwithstanding prevalent sharp easterly winds—have covered the country with vegetation, that gives promise of abundance. The reports, in the Provincial papers, as to the prices of farm stock of all kinds at the "Great Fairs"—which are now becoming general, not confined to Ballenasloe or Limerick—are very favorable to the farmers. They are, accordingly, in high spirits; though the "Tenant League,"—by its council, some half dozen of the relics of Dublin agitators, that met lately somewhere in Beresford-place—has denounced the forth-coming bill for tenant-right, of Mr. SERGEANT SHEE and the Government, as "a delusion, a mockery, and a snare." The Ulstermen, indeed, would like to have their "custom" made "law"; but no landlord, now-a-days, thinks of interfering with it. If a tenant wishes to leave, he sells his "good-will"—generally by public auction—and gets the value for his "improvements" all the same as if there were an act of Parliament authorizing him.

There is not a whisper of agitation, on any subject, from Galway to Ben Hedir, or from Cape Clear to the Causeway—nor is there likely to be, while our present Lord Lieutenant continues his active, unwearied, imperial administration. Occasionally, indeed, the "Missioners" of the two churches—or their zealous partisans—come into collision; but then it is only noisy. There are no assaults now, or appeals to the Quarter Sessions. The challenges, and correspondence, and discourses, fill the local papers; and summaries are given in the Metropolitan Press; and, as each party is triumphing, only requiring more schools, readers, and other intellectual and spirited machinery, there are powerful appeals to the advocates of the respective systems—which are liberally responded to; and an improved appearance of much of the far West, including the islands, is the result. New churches and schools, where there were none—good stone chapels, with school-houses, replacing the former mud turf cabins, called villages, and the substitution of houses fit for human beings to live in, with improved land cultivation. The consequence of the change in proprietorship, is to give quite a changed appearance to the country. If some of those who have emigrated within the last half dozen years, were to return half a dozen years hence, they would find themselves in a new and strange land.

Further Particulars of the Erie Railroad Accident.

The accident near Sloatsburg, on the Erie Railroad, was caused by a cow being upon the track about a mile west of that place, the engine threwing the cow with such violence that she was cast upon a wood pile, and some of the sticks fell upon the track. The sticks fell between the baggage and passenger cars, throwing the passenger cars Nos. 25, 16 and 20, off the track, the first with such force as to sever the body from the truck, which was thrown down an embankment on its side. There is hope of the recovery of Mrs. THELOW.

The U. S. Mail steamer Atlantic, from Liverpool on the morning of Saturday, June 2, arrived at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The Atlantic arrived out at 6:50 P. M. of Sunday, May 27.

The war news brought by this arrival is the most important that we have received since the passage of the Alma. Intelligence by last steamer announced that after two nights of sanguinary conflict, the French had driven the Russian garrison from a strong position of defence before Sebastopol, and had themselves occupied it. The loss of both sides was little less than eight thousand men. Since then, two more important strategic movements have been effected by the Allies, with complete success.

The first was the seizure and occupation of the Russian position on the Tchernaya, which was effected with but little loss, the enemy retiring before the allied advance. The other success was yet more important, being nothing less than the capture of Kertsch, the destruction of the Russian squadron and fortifications there, and the obtaining of entire possession of the Sea of Azoff, on the waters of which the allies have now fourteen steamers.

The enterprise was accomplished without the loss of a man, the Russians having themselves destroyed their defences and retired. The telegraph wires being exclusively in the hands of the Government, ten days must elapse ere the public can learn anything beyond what the War Department chooses to dole forth, but the possession by the Allies of the important station of Kertsch, whence the garrison of Sebastopol drew most of their supplies, must exercise a speedy influence on the siege.

There were rumors of another great battle having been fought at Inkermann, but the statements want confirmation.

Diplomacy is particularly busy at the present moment. The expected resumption of the Vienna conferences has not taken place, the success in the Crimea encouraging the allied Governments to hold out for better terms. Austrian negotiation is more active than ever, with the view of obtaining for the Cabinet of Vienna a supremacy in Germany.

From Spain we have accounts that the Carlist insurrection is checked; but the Government has been compelled to apply to the Cortes for additional powers.

In Britain, money continued very plentiful. Since the loan was announced in April, Consols have advanced upwards of 4 per cent., and are now quoted 92¾. The Liverpool Cotton Market continued excited, and had advanced ¼d. on the week. Breadstuffs were dull at previous quotations.

IMPORTANT FROM SPAIN.

Carlist Insurrections—Doings of the Cortes—The Law Repealing Mortmain—Miscellaneous.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Tuesday, May 22, 1855.

On the 22d of May the Minister of the Interior communicated to the Cortes at Madrid that a faction of eighty men had made their appearance near Ealstayad, a town not far from Saragossa, proclaiming CHARLES VI.; and that at the same hour three sections of cavalry (94 men) had fled from Saragossa, where they formed part of the garrison, crying "Viva el Rey!" As far as I can learn, there was but one officer with the cavalry, and one with the party on foot, both known as having been Carlists. The Captain General of the Province had immediately followed these rebels with a force composed partly of the troops of the line and partly of the National Militia. Orders were immediately given in Madrid for the Brigadier SERSANO, with the Farnesian Regiment of cavalry from Alcala, to proceed towards the scene of action. Troops of all arms have also marched from Guadalajara, and every means have been taken to put down every attempt at disturbing the public peace and to commence a civil war again in Spain. At the last accounts, the General in command of the Queen's troops had nearly come up with the insurgents. Should I learn anything more before the mail for the United States closes, you shall have it.

The Cortes immediately, upon receipt of this news, passed a bill unanimously, and in the midst of the most profound silence, declaring their confidence in, and resolution to support, the Government. ESPARTERO, with his usual enthusiasm, offered his sword and life in persecution of the rebels.

It is rumored in Madrid that other insurrections have broken out in other parts of Spain, under different pretexts, but nothing is certain except what I have given you. There is no doubt but that the Carlists and the "Palaces" with some "Moderados" among them, have combined together for the purpose of overthrowing the party and officials now in power in Spain; but their chance is very small, although it is their last chance, and the knowledge of this may incite them to desperate means.

The bill of Release from Mortmain, the most liberal law ever passed in Spain, and a great step towards freeing themselves from the overbearing influence of Rome, is unpopular with many for different reasons. It is unpopular with the clergy, as it is a vital blow to their power, wealth and influence; it is unpopular with many of the poorer classes, especially in the country, on account of the sale of "propios" on town lands, where, in many places, persons who fed their cattle for nothing, will now be obliged to pay a small sum to the individual who becomes the owner; and lastly, many who think it is a good law, fear that it will not be properly administered; the experience of some of the sales of Convent property, &c., some years since, having taught them that such sales are not always to the public interest, and that in many cases, through a system of corruption and favoritism, the full worth of the lands, &c., is not obtained. These and many other things combine to agitate the public mind in Spain; still I think and hope this all will go well there. Many persons occupying and having to do with the lands which are to be sold, have been detected cutting down trees and otherwise injuring and destroying the public property, so that I strict watch upon these depredations has been enjoined in all parts of Spain.

The Ministry of Finance has done nothing as yet; propositions of all kinds are constantly being made for procuring a supply of the "needful," but as all these would bring more benefits to their projectors than the public, they won't do. Some rumors have been prevalent of a loan, at home, from some Dutch or English capitalists, but I am afraid that these are "Chateaux en Espagne."

It is also rumored that on the 23d some of the heads of Departments in the Ministry of Finance have resigned—probably in disgust.

The Bishop of Cuba had left Cadiz for the place of his exile in the Canaries. He, as you will recollect, was one of the most determined opponents of the Release from the Mortmain bill, and expressed his resolutions to undergo any martyrdom upon the occasion. The Minister to the United States has not as yet been appointed, but they now talk of Sr. BERNUDEZ DE CASTRO, as present Minister of Spain in Naples.

Mr. DOUSE is expected soon at Madrid, and people are curious to see what kind of a gentleman he is.

The cholera continues very mild. On the 22d there were but thirty cases. I don't believe it is anything more than cholera morbus.

The weather in Madrid, and indeed throughout all Spain, has been remarkably cool.

On the 22d the Three Per Cents were done at 23.20; deferred at 19.12. Yours truly,

AN AMERICAN.

P. S.—I have just received some further news. Aragon, Burgos and Navarre have been declared under martial law by a royal decree of the 24th inst. The Governor of Saragossa had come up with the rebels at 12 o'clock at night, but they immediately dispersed, and owing to the darkness of the night, and to the fatigue of his troops, who had marched for eighteen hours, he was unable to follow them.

The Ministry on the 24th presented the project of a law to the Cortes, which has not as yet been acted upon. Here you have it: "The Government is authorized, when the Council of Ministers agree unanimously upon the subject, to send or remove from one point of the Peninsula to any other, any Spaniard who, from information in its possession, it may believe guilty of intention to disturb public order or to conspire against the security of the State, of the constitutional throne of Donna ISABEL Segunda, or the representative Government; and also to suspend the circulation of periodicals which it may consider as exciting, aiding or preparing to rebellion, giving an account to the Cortes of the use made of this authority."

THE WAR.

Progress of the Siege.

The official dispatches go back to the 15th of May, on which day Lord RAGLAN writes that the fire of the enemy had been slack, being chiefly directed against the French works. The Sardinian contingent were landed, and the 12th English Lancers had arrived.

Fifty cases of Cholera and 40 deaths were reported in the English army, with other cases among the French. Abundance of food is supplied to the troops. Much praise is bestowed on the appearance of the Sardinians, who have landed in fine condition and well supplied with all the material of war.

MAY 19.—The fourth parallel was completed. Heat had succeeded to rain. There had been hardly any firing on either side. Large convoys had entered Sebastopol from the north side. The Russians are working vigorously at the north side, where they are erecting an earthwork.

The British are moving all their heavy mortars of 13 and 10 inches into the advanced parallels. Two deserters from Sebastopol reported the garrison very strong numerically, but the hot weather was causing sickness.

Letter from the Camp.

From the London Times Correspondent.

HOT WEATHER—LACK OF WATER.

The weather has been so hot for the last few days that fears may be reasonably entertained of the results of lengthened marches or extreme exertion in the sun; in the trenches the temperature is stifling and the atmosphere unwholesome. So far as I am aware, the men still wear the same coats and trousers which they had in the Winter; nor has there been, to the best of my belief, any issue of Summer clothing. The excitement of a march would, however, be very beneficial to the troops, provided they were not overworked, and that they were saved from the outbreak of the terrible maladies which devastated our armies last Summer. The possession of the Tchernaya will soon become of consequence to us, were it only for the want of water. I am credibly informed that the rains which fell within the last week in of most unusual occurrence at this time of year, and that such a supply of water is an exceptional circumstance which makes the heart of all the Southern Crimea glad in time of peace, and fills the farmers with joyful gratitude to Heaven. Henceforth, till the month of July, we can expect no rain. There will not be a drop of water from the sky to fill our wells and water-courses for months to come, and the fears I expressed several weeks ago with respect to a scarcity more terrible in its effects to man and beast than fighting itself are becoming more and more real. We are now in the hottest day of the year, takes the sun and a variance of the plateau on which we are encamped. The consumption of water by an army of 100,000 men, and by tens of thousands of camp followers, by myriads of cattle, and by beasts of burden, may be readily conceived to be very great, and to increase as the heat does, just in proportion as the means of meeting it are diminished by the same cause. Some noble streams have been made to overspread dense and form reservoirs; the engineers and sappers have also been made, to have Artesian wells, but I am not aware that any great success has attended the latter enterprise, and I know that the Tchernaya has very imperfectly carried out. Major FARQUHARSON, of the 17th, constructed some good troughs near Kazanly. Colonel HARDINGE, with sapper means, has made a very excellent reservoir at the summit of Balaklava, and there have been isolated instances here and there of similar foresight, but to the best of my knowledge nothing has been done to provide water for "the army"—that thirsty monster, with 300,000 or 400,000 mouths and stomachs, who will soon be sweltering and gasping beneath a fretting sun, worn out by exertion, and maddened by want of the vital necessary. Capt. OWEN, Royal Engineers, had been engaged in the interval of his labors in the trenches in sinking wells, and I know that some of water by order of Lord RAGLAN, but since that scientific and zealous officer was so severely wounded, there has not been any engineer, so far as I know, systematically engaged in the search. The efforts to have Arcasian wells have met been successful, and I have been informed by Mr. Upton that he constructed several hundred feet through the solid rock beneath the soil of his farm, and failed to find any trace of water. The number of wells on the plateau itself indicates sufficiently the extremity to which the very few inhabitants must be reduced now and then in hot dry weather. Around the farm houses which Lord RAGLAN dwells, there are, I believe, no less than six deep wells, and it is only wonderful that they have stood so long, although, perhaps, somewhat recently by the drainage consequent upon the saturation of the whole plateau by heavy rains. There has been some work, laid down about "the fleet supplying the army with water." The bulk of our army is 10 or 12 miles from the anchorage of the fleet, and water is one of the most difficult articles to carry known to us. Where are our tanks, our water-bags, our transport to supply us from Sebastopol? Above all, where is our transport? Difficulties have already arisen respecting the carriage of rum from Balaklava to the front, and it is to be seen, and feared, how we manage water. And, then, what are the means at our command to the fleet, or to the distilling apparatus? In the fleet to provide water for transportation to the army! Are we, in other words, to be left to take our chance of doing of three in Summer, just as we were drowned in rain in Winter? Some days ago we had possession of the Tchernaya, it would be far to carry the water up some hills 300 or 400 feet above its bed to the plateau on top of which it flows, and the enemy would probably be gathering of the army. This is a vital question, if our army is to remain here. I remain,

THE WAR.

Progress of the Siege.

The official dispatches go back to the 15th of May, on which day Lord RAGLAN writes that the fire of the enemy had been slack, being chiefly directed against the French works. The Sardinian contingent were landed, and the 12th English Lancers had arrived.

Fifty cases of Cholera and 40 deaths were reported in the English army, with other cases among the French. Abundance of food is supplied to the troops. Much praise is bestowed on the appearance of the Sardinians, who have landed in fine condition and well supplied with all the material of war.

MAY 19.—The fourth parallel was completed. Heat had succeeded to rain. There had been hardly any firing on either side. Large convoys had entered Sebastopol from the north side. The Russians are working vigorously at the north side, where they are erecting an earthwork.

The British are moving all their heavy mortars of 13 and 10 inches into the advanced parallels. Two deserters from Sebastopol reported the garrison very strong numerically, but the hot weather was causing sickness.

HOT WEATHER—LACK OF WATER.

The weather has been so hot for the last few days that fears may be reasonably entertained of the results of lengthened marches or extreme exertion in the sun; in the trenches the temperature is stifling and the atmosphere unwholesome. So far as I am aware, the men still wear the same coats and trousers which they had in the Winter; nor has there been, to the best of my belief, any issue of Summer clothing. The excitement of a march would, however, be very beneficial to the troops, provided they were not overworked, and that they were saved from the outbreak of the terrible maladies which devastated our armies last Summer. The possession of the Tchernaya will soon become of consequence to us, were it only for the want of water. I am credibly informed that the rains which fell within the last week in of most unusual occurrence at this time of year, and that such a supply of water is an exceptional circumstance which makes the heart of all the Southern Crimea glad in time of peace, and fills the farmers with joyful gratitude to Heaven. Henceforth, till the month of July, we can expect no rain. There will not be a drop of water from the sky to fill our wells and water-courses for months to come, and the fears I expressed several weeks ago with respect to a scarcity more terrible in its effects to man and beast than fighting itself are becoming more and more real. We are now in the hottest day of the year, takes the sun and a variance of the plateau on which we are encamped. The consumption of water by an army of 100,000 men, and by tens of thousands of camp followers, by myriads of cattle, and by beasts of burden, may be readily conceived to be very great, and to increase as the heat does, just in proportion as the means of meeting it are diminished by the same cause. Some noble streams have been made to overspread dense and form reservoirs; the engineers and sappers have also been made, to have Artesian wells, but I am not aware that any great success has attended the latter enterprise, and I know that the Tchernaya very imperfectly carried out. Major FARQUHARSON, of the 17th, constructed some good troughs near Kazanly. Colonel HARDINGE, with sapper means, has made a very excellent reservoir at the summit of Balaklava, and there have been isolated instances here and there of similar foresight, but to the best of my knowledge nothing has been done to provide water for "the army"—that thirsty monster, with 300,000 or 400,000 mouths and stomachs, who will soon be sweltering and gasping beneath a fretting sun, worn out by exertion, and maddened by want of the vital necessary. Capt. OWEN, Royal Engineers, had been engaged in the interval of his labors in the trenches in sinking wells, and I know that some of water by order of Lord RAGLAN, but since that scientific and zealous officer was so severely wounded, there has not been any engineer, so far as I know, systematically engaged in the search. The efforts to have Arcasian wells have met been successful, and I have been informed by Mr. Upton that he constructed several hundred feet through the solid rock beneath the soil of his farm, and failed to find any trace of water. The number of wells on the plateau itself indicates sufficiently the extremity to which the very few inhabitants must be reduced now and then in hot dry weather. Capture of Kertsch—The Allied Squadron Enters the Sea of Azoff.

Lord RAGLAN telegraphs:

CRIMEA, May 27.—We are masters of the Sea of Azoff without a casualty. The troops landed at Kertsch on Her Majesty's birth-day, and the enemy fled, leaving on their fortifications on both sides of the [illegible] and destroying their steamers; some vessels and fifty guns have fallen into the hands of the enemy.

On May 26, Lord PANMURE, dating from the War Department 10½ A. M., sent his compliments to the editors of the London papers, and informed them that further intelligence had been received from Lord RAGLAN, announcing that General Sir Colin Campbell had reached Yenikale at 1 P. M. on the 24th of May, having, the previous day, destroyed a battery near Kertsch, where shot, shell and Minie balls were manufactured. In the advance the French were on the right, the English on the left, and the Turks in reserve.

Off the Sebastopol, May 30, Lord RAGLAN again telegraphs that letters received from Sir GEORGE BROWN and Admiral LYONS, of 29th, announce the destruction by the enemy of four (Russian) war steamers and large depôts of corn. The allied ships had succeeded in blowing up a magazine at Arabat, and in destroying about one hundred merchant vessels. Only one steamship remained of the enemy's fleet in the Sea of Azoff.

The Admiralty account says that on the appearance of the Allied Squadron before Berdiansk the Russians burned four war steamers, and considerable number of corn; 166 merchant ships were destroyed.

Lord PANMURE announces to the press that advices, dated 26th, from Sir GEORGE BROWN state the troops continued healthy. Five vessels laden with corn had run into Kertsch, not knowing the place was taken, and were captured. The number of guns found by the Allies exceeds 100.

Matters continued much the same in the Crimea.

A French account says the Russians burned 20 transports as well as their four steamships, and destroyed 250,000 sacks of corn, 140,000 sacks of [illegible] and 120,000 sacks of flour. In the evening 14 Allied steamers entered the Sea of Azoff.

Another account from Varna, May 28, says:

"On the Queen's birth-day the allied expedition arrived off the Straits of Kertsch. The troops landed, and ascended the heights, and the small steamers went up to Kertsch. The Russians blew up their fortifications and fled, after destroying several ships and very large quantities of wheat, flour and corn. Thirty vessels were burned, thirty taken, and fifty guns. Reinforcements were daily arriving at Constantinople. The occupation of Galatz and an attack upon Ismael and Reni are contemplated."

Liverpool Cotton Market.

LIVERPOOL, Friday, June 1, 1855.

There is not the slightest movement in the demand for Cotton notwithstanding the unprecedented amount of business in the preceding week; and this concludes the eight week, with sales of upwards of one hundred thousand bales in cask, and the fortnight since the motion commenced, in which period the sales have amounted to 1,262,000 bales, 750,000 being for consumption, 55,750 for export, and 455,000 taken by speculators, and from the lowest point prices of American have advanced 1d. @ 1d. The demand for the entire part of the week was principally from speculators (the trade, however, purchasing to a fair extent) and the great activity to the market was given on Monday by the American accounts showing diminished receipts again and increased prices. Spinners have been free buyers the last two days, but more particularly yesterday, attributed in some measure by an improvement in the Manchester market; and the consequence of all this activity is a considerable rise in prices, greater than is generally supposed, and which, when the investigation is made, it will be seen, being advanced fully 1d. @ 2d.

There has been a good demand for Brazils, and prices are about 1d. @ 2d. dearer. In Egyptians also, the sales have been extensive, but as they are freely offered, the advance in price is not very important, although it amounts to nearly 1d. @ 2d. The demand for Surats has been very extensive, and the stock being moderate, and the quantity on the way small for the time of year, prices have improved considerably, and we advance the quotations more than 1d. @ 2d. 70,400 bales American, 1,300 Pernam, 300 Bahia, 400 Maranham, 800 Egyptian, and 12,600 Surat, have been taken on speculation and for export, and 64,000 bales by the trade. The actual export consists of 5,800 Americans, 410 Brazil, &c., and the sales of Sundries—in all, 8,400 bales. The sales to-day amount to 20,000 bales, of which 12,000 are taken on speculation and for export.

The Crops in South Jersey—Price of Land.

Extract of a letter, dated

BRIDGETON, Cumberland Co., N. J., June 12.

The Spring with us was dry, no rain of any consequence falling until the middle of May. We were unfortunate in this respect even beyond other neighborhoods and districts; for we heard constantly of showers and wet weather elsewhere. We have no cause for complaint now, however. Wheat promises to make a very large yield. It is somewhat beaten down by the high winds, but the crop will be heavy. Clover in short. The drought held on a little too long for it. But timothy hay will be unusually fine. The weather is too cold for corn, but it looks well, only not so far advanced as should be. There is every probability that we shall have abundance of potatoes. The temperature is exceedingly cold for the season; but this certainly cannot last; and, if we have a little more warmth, we may anticipate a year of rare productiveness.

Rents in this county sell from fifty to a hundred and fifty dollars per acre, according to quality of soil and location. Much land now covered with timber can come in bought for from one to two dollars per acre, and at slight cost made to be very profitable for agriculture. A great deal of this property is now being sold. The West Jersey Railroad, constructed in part from Camden to Cape May, crosses this county, and, when completed, will bring our products within a very few hours of the two greatest markets in the country. This whole region can then be made available for the purpose of supplying those markets. It is excellently adapted to do so by the nature of its soil. We may reasonably expect that the value of land hereabouts will be greatly enhanced by the carrying out of this enterprise.

Calamity in Iowa City!—A Building Fallen—Four Men Killed and Seven Dangerously Wounded—"Reporter" Printing Office Demolished.

From the Dubuque Tribune.

We are pained to be informed of the following calamitous casualty. By a passenger in the stage, who left Iowa City yesterday at 10 o'clock, we learn that yesterday morning, at 7 o'clock, a large stone building, next door west of the Park House, and belonging to Mr. John CLARK, fell—one of the side walls giving way and falling inwardly, burying under the ruins four carpenters and plasterers, at work in the first story.

The second story had been framed, and was occupied by the Reporter printing office. Some of the printers were in the office at the time, but hearing the noise of the wall giving way, succeeded in making their escape by the back door, and had but just got out when the crash came.

After the falling, the building took fire. The cries of the wounded could be heard, but faintly, and sounding as if at a great distance. The people commenced as soon as practicable, with great rapidity, to extinguish the flames and recover the unfortunate sufferers. They soon put out the fire, and then rapidly removed the rubbish, until they extricated the four unfortunates. Upon one the printing press had fallen, and he was dead. The other three were terribly cut up, and our informant was told by an attending physician, that they could survive but a few hours.

The cause of the catastrophe was a cellar, newly dug near the western side of the building, and the heavy rains of Wednesday night undermined the underpinning.

Mr. W. G. HICKMAN, of this city, had rented the first story for a bookstore, and intended to occupy it as soon as finished.

The escape of Mr. PATTON, of the Reporter office, who happened to be the only man in the room overhead at the time, is full as miraculous as that of the others. He was at his case, when the settling began and hearing a slight ticking sound, he saw an opening in the ceiling. Giving one shout of warning to the boys who were in the room adjoining, he made for the door, at least twenty-five feet distant, and as he put one foot on the threshold, felt the floor sinking beneath his other. All then rushed to the back door of the building, and jumped from the low story projection, without injury.

We have not the time or inclination to recount the various incidents of this calamity. It is enough to say that it has cost the life of one worthy young man; injured others perhaps seriously; involved a pecuniary loss of at least $6,000 to the owner of the building, and utterly ruined one of the most complete Printing Offices in this State.

The name of the unfortunate young man who was killed, was CHARLES S. SEVERSON, and he was buried by the Odd Fellows of this city on Friday last.

THE PORTLAND RIOT.

Neal Dow's History of the Riot and Its Suppression.

CITY OF PORTLAND, MAYOR'S OFFICE, June 9, 1855.

To the Board of Aldermen:

The undersigned deems it his duty to make a detailed but succinct report to the Board of Aldermen, of the events of June 2, in relation to which so many varying accounts are now in circulation throughout the State and country.

On the afternoon of that day it became manifest to all observers, that an unusual excitement existed among many persons in the city who are well known as members of the Maine Law. A large number of such persons were present at the Police Court room, while a process was being prosecuted to procure the seizure and destruction of liquors which had been received from New-York by a Committee of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, by the authority of that Board, for the supply of the City Agency, which the Board had determined to establish.

It was not thought at the time that any movement would be made by such persons beyond an attempt to destroy these liquors by due process of law. But late in the afternoon, intelligence was communicated to the Mayor and Aldermen, that an extensive combination had been formed, and that arrangements had been made to assemble a mob for the purpose of breaking into the City Agency and destroying the liquors therein contained. At the time of this communication large numbers of excited persons were assembled around the City Hall, in which the Agency is located, demanding that the liquors should be brought out.

The Mayor and Aldermen did not at that time apprehend that any mob would or could be raised in the city, which it would be beyond the power of the ordinary police force to quell, but early in the evening they thought otherwise. The City Marshal with a few policemen, some of them with revolvers, and some of them without, came, was directed to enter the room and defend it to the last extremity; and the rest of the police force were directed to do their utmost among the mob to disperse it, and to identify as many as possible, of the active persons composing it.

The Mayor and several of the Aldermen being at the Mayor's office in the evening, were warned by repeated and urgent messages, that the mob was collecting in great force, exhibiting every appearance of savage ferocity. Messages were then sent to the commanding officers of the Light Guards and the Rifle Guards, and a formal demand was made upon them for their assistance, which for a consideration in money, they had agreed with a preceding administration to render, as an armed police force, whenever they should be called upon by the City Government for that purpose.

The companies were called together hastily at their armories, and were visited there by the Mayor and some of the Aldermen, who formally requested the aid of them for their services and assistance in quelling the mob, as an armed police force, or as citizens in arms, according to their agreement with the City Government. The Rifle Guards, first visited, had neither ammunition nor caps; and none suitable, after many efforts and much delay, could be procured in the City.

While the officers of the Rifle Guards were actually employed in the effort to procure the necessary munitions, the Mayor and some of the Aldermen repaired to the armory of the Light Guards, situated in the third story of the City Hall. The members of the Company were there assembled in full force, and an appeal was made to the Captain to form and march out without delay. He also was without cartridges, but was told that the apprehension of his company with full ranks and with determined front and with bayonets would be sufficient. The Captain thought otherwise, and declined to expose his command to the fury of the mob without cartridges. During all this time, we heard from below the ferocious sounds of the mob, the clatter of stones and other missiles, the rattle of broken glass and the crash of breaking blinds, shutters and doors.

After some delay cartridges were procured and the muskets were loaded, when about 24 men only fell into the ranks with shouldered arms. Again the Captain expressed opinions against exposing such a force to the fury of the mob; he did not feel himself justified in so doing, but the reply to him was, that half of them would be sufficient if they were brave and true men. At the word, the men marched out, with the Captain and Aldermen BROCKS and CARLETON and myself at their head, but some of the number fell out of the ranks on the way down the stairs and through the crowd.

The Sheriff of the County attended us in the march, and stepping out into the crowd, commanded the people in the name and by authority of the State to disperse, assuring them they would otherwise be fired upon. But he was answered only by jeers and savage brawls from the mob. The Sheriff repeated his command several times, and his voice was distinctly heard at the corner of Preble-street.

After the members of the Light Guards had taken up their position and faced to the front on Congress-street, the crowd was several times commanded by the Mayor so as to disperse, with the assurance that otherwise they would be fired upon. The only reply were grosser and fiercer showers of missiles. By these we were pelted incessantly, and several members of the Guards were struck and some of them badly hurt, while the missiles were falling around in every direction, in their rebound from the walls of the building. Again the Captain protested against this exposure of his men to the fury of the mob, and feared some of them would be killed, if the order were not given to fire. He was told that we all shared the danger alike, and after a little further delay and another command to the crowd to disperse, which was as unheeded as all the others had been, the order was given to the Captain to fire by musketry from the left. The order was repeated by the commander, and while the arms were at present, the Captain asked if he should fire? The reply was, "Wait a little." It was thought that the order to fire would terrify the mob, but the showers of missiles continued as before, with every expression of rage.

As soon as the men recovered arms without firing, they began to drop off from the left, two men badly hurt, being carried off the ground, where they lay by their comrades, until not more than six or eight remained. The Captain was compelled to order and had been before in the armory, that we should be carported by the Rifle Guards, who were ready and willing. When our numbers were so greatly reduced, we filed off around the east end of the City Hall, away from the mob, and marched down Middle-street, towards the armory of the Rifle Guards. Near the foot of Free-street we met that company marching up in double files, when we fell in on the right, and the order was given to quicken the pace.

At this moment Capt. RODERICK informed me that his piece were empty, and he had no bayonets; he had not been able to find either bullets or caps to fit. I immediately called this to the Captain of the Light Guards, and asked that I should take the Rifle Guards into his armory and arm them with his muskets. Either we accordingly repeated at a quick step.

On arriving at our armory, an attempt was made to throw dirt into it by way of our taking the muskets, but this was promptly forbidden, and Capt. RODERICK of the Rifle Guards, immediately upon reaching the other, marched his men into the armory, and exchanged his piece for the muskets. A further delay now occurred in procuring ammunition. A few cartridges were found, which were lying on the table, and a demand was made upon the Captain of the Light Guards for them which he gave back. A few cartridges only were recovered. In the meantime the roar of the mob, with the raids and crash of missiles and the occasional vollies of pistol shots from the Police, came up in mingled confusion from below.

At this juncture, Alderman LADDEY came into the armory from the street and said—if anything were to be done, not a moment should be lost; that the Police would not hold out five minutes longer, but would fall a sacrifice to the fury of the mob. The Light Guards were then called out to join us, and one of them fell in to our ranks with two or three other citizens, who came forward and volunteered to take muskets, when we marched out, numbering a number of our number.

We filed down the stairs into Middle-street, and entered the doors of the Agency on that street, and one of the Guards was struck in the forehead and badly hurt on our entrance. The voice of the infuriated mob outside and at the door on Congress-street, drowned every other sound; nevertheless they were warned that they would be fired upon, and three or four volleys of four shots each were fired. The gas was then lighted in the room, by which the persons there were exposed to the missiles of the mob, and to prevent the slaughter of the Rifle Guards and the Police from being struck by them, they were drawn out of the building into Middle-street, the fire being open, and the mob on Congress-street was warned that any persons attempting to enter would be fired upon. The mob having broken open the doors, which they had been battering for more than two hours. The mob said the armed force maintained this attitude for a considerable time, an occasional stone being hurled through the building from Congress-street. But the greater part of the mob withdrew soon after, and the remainder were driven out of the street by the bayonet. The firing of the Rifle Guard was at five minutes past 11 o'clock, and the building was attacked as early as 8½.

Information was brought to me by several persons that the mob had retired with loud threats, and with the intention of procuring arms and of returning to the conflict. Messengers were immediately dispatched in different directions, with instructions to visit the business and residences of the citizens, and to bring the most intelligent of any appearance of new gathering; and in the meantime we hastily prepared for any further duty which might devolve upon us. But the scouts returned with the report that all was quiet.

Very soon after the firing from the building, the police made arrests of persons who had been active in the riot, and attempts at forcible rescue were made by the mob. One man, physically powerful, collected a squad of followers and waylaid three policemen who were taking a prisoner to jail, but the posse arrested him and dispersed his followers by exhibiting their pistols. I do not hesitate to characterize this mob as more determined and ferocious than any other by which this city was ever disgraced.

I learn from unbounded sources, that the mob spirit had been gathering form and force for a month before it broke out, and that it had been stimulated and fostered by men of influence whom we may be yet able to connect distinctly with it. The project had been known in this city early in May, in Boston two weeks before its execution, and it was spoken of in Saco, North Yarmouth, Gorham and Paris, on the morning of that day, as I am credibly informed.

The ringleader of the mob, who lost his life in it, was a strong and muscular man—a sailor, and had left Boston a day or two before to avoid an arrest; and I learn, on reliable authority, that he was engaged in the King riot in this city, which, I am informed, he participated in this riot deliberately, having spoken of it in the afternoon, and having refused the advice to keep away from it.

In conclusion I have only to add that all the members of the police, without exception, from the beginning to the end of the affair, were perfectly cool and collected, betraying no symptom of being flurried; and the same is true of the commander and all the members of the Rifle Guards. Everything on the part of the authorities which occurred under my notice was done with deliberation as well as with firmness and decision.

If that infuriated mob had accomplished their first object, they would have broached and set the liquors of the Agency, then, setting fire to the remainder, would have destroyed the City Hall, for that purpose was avowed—then, none but God knows how far their passions would have carried them. I regarded it as the duty of the authorities to uphold the majesty of law, and to suppress, at any hazard, the tumultuous mob which sought to overthrow law and order, and to let loose upon us all the horrors of anarchy and riot.

If the authorities had permitted themselves to have been overthrown and crushed by the mob, without employing all the power which the law had put into their hands for the suppression of tumults, they would have shown themselves to have been unworthy the confidence and respect of those who placed the government of the city in their hands. MAYOR WOOD'S REMONSTRATIVES.

Mr. Mason offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were read and laid over:

Whereas, By a resolution which originated in this Board, certain information was respectfully solicited of the Commissioners of Police, for the purpose solely of ascertaining the Common Council a statement from them of the necessity for an addition to the Police Department, by ascertaining whether the present force was economically employed; and

Whereas, Said information was solicited in language entirely respectful and without conveying the slightest suspicion upon the Board to whom the application was made; but something in the mind of some gentleman right to interfere in its action, but on the contrary solicitous to expressly by admitting ignorance of the matter inquired into; and

Whereas, Under the construction of His Honor the Mayor, in his communication to this Board concerning the information solicited, it is not altogether impossible but that the Board of Count Inclosers of Police in the plenitude of their power have the exclusive right, (by implication, perhaps,) to add to or diminish the number in the Police Department; and

Whereas, This Board is not anxious to assume a doubtful power; and thus embarrass itself in a multiplicity of matter not within the provision of Mayor-tered prerogatives; and

Whereas, A Department of our City Government is willing to incur the risks of such responsibilities; therefore

Resolved, That the proposition to add thirty-two to the Police be indefinitely postponed.

Resolved, That the Mayor, in saying he recognized no authority in the Common Council to supervise his conduct in the discharge of his power to detail policemen, is doubtless correct, so far as it concerns his conception of his own personal affairs, but that assertion is not warranted by any action of this Board, nor is it in unison with the Republican ideas of a Republican people, in whom is vested the supreme supervision of all officers, not excepting the Mayor of the City of New-York.

RESOLUTION REFERRED.

To request the Second-avenue Railroad Company to raise their track in Allen, between Broome and Rivington streets, and repair the street. To fill up and fence lot No. 36 Leonard-street.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED.

A Baggage-Master in Trouble.

ABRAHAM A. SCHANCK, a young man about twenty years of age, and baggage-master on board of the steamboat Armenia, plying between this City and Albany, was arrested yesterday on the complaint of JOHN S. HASKIN, Corporation Attorney, on the charge of grand larceny. Mr. HASKIN was bound for Albany last Saturday, and took passage on the steamboat Armenia. He and the baggage-master quarrelled on the way up. He alleges that he was told by the baggage-master that he would regret this quarrel. The luggage which should have gone to Albany was left at Catskill, and never reached Albany. He discovered where the luggage was on his way home, and now makes the complaint that there was an attempt of grand larceny on the part of the baggage-master. The accused was held to bail by Justice CONNOLLY.

A Woman Threatening to Shoot.

MARY STEWART, a well known woman of the town, was arrested yesterday on the charge of threatening to shoot a man who had been attempting to rescue his brother from her den. It seems the young man had been brought up under the protectorship of an aunt, but coming to age he left her guardianship and took up with this prostitute. The brother had gone to her house for the purpose of persuading him to give up her company. MARY becoming enraged came out with a loaded pistol and threatened to blow his brains out. She was committed for examination.

A Boy Shot.

Yesterday afternoon, while a boy named WM. CARTER, aged nine years, living at No. 2 Pelham-street, was playing with a loaded pistol, it discharged, the charge entering the left hand, mutilating it in a shocking manner. He was removed to the office of Dr. T. D. ANDREWS for surgical treatment. The Doctor considers the wound of a dangerous character.

Rockstone in Admiralty on Appeal.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—June 13.

The following decision was this morning rendered by Judge NELSON. The case was argued before him on the 16th of May last.

The decision in the District Court was reversed by Judge BETHUNE, who dismissed the libel.

[illegible]

Another Suit of Mason Brothers, appellants, vs. The Steamboat Rhode.

BEFORE J.—This suit was filed to recover damages for the loss of the schooner H. N. Day, with her cargo, which vessel was wrecked and sunk on the Raritan River, New-Jersey, in the night of the 6th November, 1854, some two miles below New-Brunswick, having run against or against vessel lying on the bed of the river, while on her way to Brooklyn, N. Y. The canal-boat was so far under water that persons navigating the river at night were unable to see where she lay.

The same cog boats belonging to the claimants, left New-Brunswick on the same evening with the H. N. Day, but some hours before her, for the City of New-York, with six canal-boats and barges in tow, laden with coal and other articles; and while proceeding down the river, not the propeller, but coming up, which came in collision with one of the canal-boats with such violence that she immediately filled and sunk. The collision was owing to the negligence and carelessness of the propeller, and without any fault on the part of the tug.

The canal boat thus sunken was the one upon which the H. N. Day, the vessel of the libelants, ran a few hours afterwards, and which occasioned the loss complained of in the libel. The captain and crew of the canal boat were on board during the navigation of the tow, and at the time of the collision by the propeller, but were under the orders and direction of the master of the tug. According to the terms of the contract entered into by the owners of the tug before the canal boat was taken in tow, she was to be towed at the risk of the owners. After the collision the captain and crew were discharged from further duty and returned to New-Brunswick.

The ground upon which the libelants seek to recover for the loss of the schooner and cargo, contained by the vessel running upon the sunken canal boat, is the negligence and want of care on the part of the tug in not stopping to keep or boat at the place with a light, or in some other way giving reasonable warning of the danger to vessels navigating the river.

The Court below dismissed the libel, holding that no such duty, under the circumstances, was imposed upon the tug; and to this opinion we are inclined to assent.

The case concerns that the canal boat was separated from the tug, and sunk without any fault on her part, and was wholly occasioned by the wrongful act of the propeller. The tug, therefore, was not responsible for the act of sinking the boat, and, of course, not for the loss of the hay, libel or cargo. If the contract, then, stands on the footing of a tow, the tug is not liable for the entire loss, he could look only to the propeller. This was a question exclusively between these parties. No duty attached to the tug in respect to it.

The right of property in the boat still remained in the owners after she was sunk, and they might in their discretion immediately have taken the proper measures to raise and repair her, or, if they elected to abandon her, and look to the owning vessel for damages, the owners of that vessel might, if they deemed it better for their interest to the disturbance that had occurred, assume the responsibility and expense of raising her. In the case of a collision, which results in the sinking of the injured vessel, there is sometimes great difficulty in arriving at the actual damage sustained in the absence of any effort to raise her. She may have been so broken, and submerged, as to render any effort to raise her hopeless, and thus the entire loss of vessel and cargo would be the measure of damages. She may also be in such a situation, as to be recovered from her sunken condition at an expense that would diminish the extent of the loss either who occurring. In such a case, the value of the vessel would not be the measure of damages to be awarded; but the measure would be the expense of the raising of the vessel, and the repairs, together with reasonable compensation for loss of use in the meantime. And, where the sunken vessel is abandoned by the owners, with the design of looking to the colliding vessel for the entire value, it may sometimes be for the interest of the owners responsible to assert their responsibility as claimed, and take measures to raise and repair the vessel for their own benefit. At all events, this is a right I think properly belonging to them, if they choose to assert it.

As we have already stated, therefore, the right of property in the sunken canal boat was still in the original owners, or if they chose to abandon it, the right might be exercised by the party responsible for the loss, which in this case was the propeller. In no event had the tug any interest in the matter.

Then, which of these parties was under obligation to place a light at the point of obstruction on the river, occasioned by the sinking of the boat, if any one of them? Upon general principles, the duty would seem naturally to belong either to the proprietor of the boat, or to the party guilty of the wrong in sinking it in the public highway. Whether it would devolve upon either, it is unnecessary to determine in this case. The case of Rex ex. Watts, (1 Esp. N. P. R. 675,) raises a doubt as to the duty of the owner under the circumstances stated. The Court there held, that the owner of a vessel sunk in a navigable river by misfortune, or inevitable accident without his fault, was not liable to an indictment for a public nuisance for not removing the obstruction. This decision necessarily excludes the idea of any duty resting upon the owner in such a case to remove his sunken vessel; and raises, at least, a pretty strong implication, that he would not be bound to take any other measure of precaution, to prevent the injurious effect of it upon the navigation.

Whether the injury to the libelants' schooner, in running upon the sunken boat, was not a consequence too remote, as resulting from the collision, to charge the vessel in fault in that transaction, is a question upon which much might be said, and which we do not intend to determine.

But to all this as it may, we are satisfied that the tug in this case cannot be charged with the injury upon any sound or consistent principle. Her owners had no other interest in or control over the canal-boat than what arose out of the contract to tow her to the place of destination. When they had discharged that duty their obligations ceased. This is especially so in the case where the captain and crew of the tow accompanied her in the navigation. On the termination of that contract the control and disposition of the boat belonged exclusively to the captain, as she was no longer subject to the orders or direction of the master of the tug. It is difficult to see where the responsibility of the owners of the tug would cease, if carried beyond the scope and limit of their contract. These can be no hardship as it respects third persons or the public in confining it to this limit, for, on the termination of the contract, and the consequent responsibility of the owners of the tug, that of the owners of the tow begins, or, rather, in judgment of law, is assumed, the power over it by virtue of the contract for towing having ceased.

It is said the owners of the tug should be held responsible for the obstruction in this case, as they were instrumental in producing it, having towed the boat to the place where she was sunk. But this was an act not only lawful in itself, but an act procured by the owners of the canal boat. There is nothing, therefore, in this circumstance that can, upon any consistent reasoning, shift the responsibility from the owners of the boat to those of the tug. But, further, assume, for this suggestion is, that the circumstance of the boat's being on the river at the place where she was towed and sunk, was the fault of no one. She had a right to be there. And we may add, also, as admitted by the facts of the case, it was no fault of either of these parties that she was at the bottom of the river. That was the fault of the vessel that ran her down.

The argument that would prove the tug liable in this case to place lights at the place of the sunken boat to warn vessels of the danger, it seems to us, must be carried the length of making her responsible for raising the boat, and removing the obstruction. For, we do not see how that duty is to be distinguished from the one claimed of keeping up lights or some other notice of the danger, so long as the obstruction continues. The duty, as to lights, can be maintained only upon the idea that the tug is responsible for the obstruction.

We cannot think her thus responsible, where she is neither the owner of the thing constituting the obstruction, nor in any way in fault in placing it there.

Decree below affirmed.

The Chemical Bank Forgery—Trial of Lyman Cole Suddenly Terminated—The Contempt Case.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—June 13.

Before Hon. Recorder Scott.

Yesterday, at the opening of Court, the Recorder, addressing the District Attorney, said that he had received a note from Mr. Jordan, Cole's counsel, stating that it would be impossible for him to be in attendance before Thursday. The Recorder observed that this continued delay must necessarily be prejudicial to the prisoner, as the Jury, not having heard a word of evidence, could not avoid having their minds influenced by the remarks of other parties, especially as the case was attracting a great deal of public attention.

The District Attorney, in reply, proposed to withdraw a Juror, on the plea made by the prisoner, if he came to an end. He would want to try Cole again, that it was not his intention to try Cole again upon the same indictment; but he would try him on a blended indictment.

Mr. Bennett rose, as object, on behalf of Cole, to the suspension of the trial. As there was no motion before the Court, the Recorder refused to hear him. Mr. Bennett still persevered in his efforts to be heard, when the Recorder ordered him to take his seat.

In reply to Mr. Bennett, the District Attorney said that the new indictment against Cole would relate to the Chemical Bank

The News by the Atlantic.

The intelligence by the Atlantic is of unusual and stirring interest—the news from the Crimea being of a decidedly warlike character. The allied fleets have taken unopposed possession of Kertch. They bombarded the forts of Arabat on the southwest corner of the Sea of Azoff, which sea contains now but a single Russian steamer, the other having been destroyed partly by the Allies and partly by the Russians themselves. More than one hundred merchantmen shared the same fate. The Allies conquer, in fact, nothing but ruins and wrecks,—the Russians, true to their ancient tactics, destroying whatever they cannot save. The progress of the Allies is, however, not the less real. By the possession of Arabat, which lies at the foot of the road that runs along the putrid sea to the Crimea, they will have restricted the Russian communications between the Peninsula and the Empire to the only outlet in their hands—the neckland of Perekop. If this should fall into the hands of OMAR PACHA, they will be shut up as effectually as any rat in a trap.

The Allies have had some bloody engagements also, before Sebastopol. General PELISSIER announces that he has put hors de combat some 6,000 Russians. GORTSCHAKOFF admits a loss of 2,500 men, but says that the French were repulsed. We need further information respecting these statements. PELISSIER shows, at all events, a great deal of activity. That he will triumph or perish seems to be clear. The Cholera, which had begun to rage in the camp, must have credit among the inducements to activity. The river Tchernaya has been given up by the Russians, but the heights that command that river and its valley are strongly fortified, and inaccessible except on two points. So PELISSIER's dispatch, pretending to a possession of the Tchernaya line, must be taken cum grano salis. Negotiations seem to have been given up for the moment, and Austria's bad humor is evident from a circular note of Count BUOL, who deprecates the publication of the protocols while the conferences are not yet closed. The Allies seem to have given up their hopes of active assistance from Austria, but they do not seem to press her into action. So she will keep to her neutrality, unless pressed by Russia to declare herself—a case not impossible, but not very imminent—at least, until Russia shall have suffered some terrible loss.

Spain is once more in intense excitement. The Carlists have risen, having first bribed a few soldiers to do so. They will be crushed, no doubt. ESPARTERO has asked for and will receive full powers from the Cortes to save the country. Democracy will help him in that work. Those "full powers" to imprison, hang, shoot, suppress newspapers, &c., are, however, weapons that ought to be withdrawn from the hands of a Government as soon as the danger has passed over, because they may, on some future day, be turned against liberty. The Pope's Nuncio was preparing to leave Madrid and to protest against the sale of Church property. The miraculous tears of the crying picture were of no avail. Excommunications will be of still less, but we should like to see that experiment and its effect in the middle of the Nineteenth Century.

Sardinia is menaced with the same chastisement, but the legislators of Turin seem to have little dread of the thunderbolts of the Vatican.

The King of Portugal and his brother are in Paris. VICTORIA is also expected there very soon, with the Lord Mayor as her avant-courier. Some signs of discontent and even partial riots for bread having manifested themselves in the faubourgs, NAPOLEON III. gives the ouvriers a free admission, once a week, on Sundays, to the Exhibition; so the number of visitors, generally below 10,000, rose last Sunday above 100,000—a small number, after all, considering the cheapness of the admission. We remark in almost all the English papers, expressions of solicitude respecting the growing spirit of discontent in Paris.

The administrative reform movement in England is spreading more and more. Meetings are held in all the towns.

VESUVIUS is calm again. Its rage ruined some small farm-houses, a few cottages of the rich and the poor, and now all is quiet again, and King BOMBA goes—as tourists will go—to see the scene of such tremendous convulsions. And then the cottages will be rebuilt on the very same spots where they stood, and so it will go on until the next eruption. Were we talking of Vesuvius or the Eastern war?

New-Hampshire.

The House of Representatives in New-Hampshire yesterday elected JOHN P. HALE to the United States Senate for the short term, and JAMES BELL for the long term. The Senate will probably concur to-day or to-morrow. This is another thorough and complete triumph of the anti-Nebraska sentiment; it occurs too, in that State which has hitherto been deemed most reliable for the slave-holding interest.

The Capture of Kertch.

The most important intelligence received from the Crimea since the landing of the Allied army at Eupatoria, and the subsequent battle of the Alma, is that brought yesterday by the Atlantic. Though very meagre in their details, the telegraphic dispatches announcing the capture of Kertch are decisive. Should they prove true—and we have no reason to suppose otherwise—the Allies have certainly gained some remarkable advantages. The importance to either of the belligerent parties of the peninsula of Kertch is apparent at a glance. It commands the Straits of Yenikale, and as a consequence the Sea of Azoff, the possession of which will enable the Allies to blockade successfully this last approach to the Russian dominions.

Kertch, it is well known, has been the principal source whence the Russians in the Crimea have, during the past Winter, so miraculously obtained their supplies. This source has now been entirely cut off, without the loss of a man to the invading army; and in whatever light it is regarded, the expedition must be considered as an advantageous and successful move. It may be urged that if Kertch was a place of strategic importance, why was it not defended by the Russians with their wonted skill and energy? The argument is worthy of consideration; but when we remember that, with the loss of the Sea of Azoff, the Russians have also been deprived of one hundred ships, including four vessels of war, and immense stores of provisions, no other conclusion can be arrived at from the facts before us, than that they have been unable to keep the Peninsula.

The advantages which the possession of Kertch gave to the Russians have now been transferred to the Allies; and with this addition, that the latter, having command of the Black Sea, will be enabled to make Kertch a depôt whence they can obtain provisions for their army in a very brief space of time. The Russians, on the other hand, will be obliged for the future to transport their provisions by land from the interior, and the difficulty of victualing an army of 200,000 men by such means would seem to be insurmountable. Time, however, will show whether the Russian Generals can draw yet further from their hidden resources, and astonish the world by overcoming even these obstacles.

Another important feature in the news from the Crimea is, that LIPRANDI has been forced to abandon the line of the Tchernaya, and that the Allies, now in possession of the River, are plentifully supplied with water—the want of which was seriously felt as the heat of Summer increased. This event is looked upon by the French and English Journals as a favorable opening of the new campaign, and a promise of future triumphs in the field. But when we mark the slight resistance offered by the Russians, as well in the affair at Kertch as in that of the Tchernaya, we believe that some explanation is yet to be made, some mystery to be revealed, will enlighten us further on such a line of tactics, so contrary to all their antecedents. The accounts received by this mail from the seat of war would seem to give some credit to the rumor current in London and Paris, that the Czar also intends opening a new campaign—that he is about to withdraw his forces from the Crimea, attack Turkey again from the Principalities, and leave Sebastopol to its fate.

A Post-Office Panic.

Ever since our earliest recollections, which run back to the later years of the postal dynasty of REUBEN J. MORGAN, the Post-Office has been an unceasing subject of complaint, on account of its irregularities, its irresponsible manner of performing one of the most important functions of the Government, and the daily inconveniences inflicted upon all classes of the people by its short-comings. A disaster to the army or navy, the misconduct of our foreign affairs, or a default in the treasury, would not be personally felt by any one of us. Nobody's night's rest would be broken by it; nobody's note would lie over in consequence; there would be no hard thoughts stirred up between intimate friends living at a distance from each other, nor any of the innumerable evils and inconveniences caused, which are entailed upon the community by the delay of a mail, or the inefficiency or dishonesty of a Post-Office official. Notwithstanding the great importance of the Post-Office to the immediate welfare, happiness and convenience of the people, it is just that Department of the Government which has always been regarded as the least important, and the head of it is almost always the weakest member of the President's Cabinet; and, in fact, it was not until the time of General JACKSON that he was thought to be of sufficient importance to be admitted into the Cabinet at all. Some of the very worst and most inefficient men that have been connected with the National Government have been placed at the head of the Post-Office Department, and the only man of first-rate ability who has occupied that post was AMOS KENDALL. As a matter of course, the Department has always been mismanaged, and a good many sensible men have doubted whether the benefits arising from the Post-Office monopoly were not more than overbalanced by the evils which seem to be inherent in the very nature of the institution; and if it were not for the political importance of the office to the party in power, we doubt if any Administration would make any objection to its entire abolition.

Since the establishment of private Express companies, and the telegraphic lines of communication with all parts of the country, the Post-office, in fact, has become an almost useless appendage to the Government; and if it were not for its monopolizing privileges, it would become the costly and burdensome for the nation to support. Recent disclosures of the abuses of the Post-Office, occasioned by the arrest of the Deputy Postmaster in New-Orleans for robbing the mails, have caused public attention to be directed to this subject, and created almost a panic through apprehension for the safety of our letters after they have been deposited in the mail bags. The public have been startled to learn that Post-Office agents have been furnished with keys to the mail bags, and have been permitted by the head of the Department not only to open the mails at their pleasure and examine the contents, but also to open letters, when they thought it necessary to do so. It seems that a Postmaster at the South, having a suspicion that one of his townsmen was in the habit of corresponding with improper people, took the liberty of opening one of his letters, and discovering Abolitionism in it, sent it to the newspaper and had it published, without reflecting that the act would convict him of mail robbery. The Government, however, sanctioned the act by not removing him from his office. This strange affair happened in the State of Mississippi, and the excuse of the Postmaster for opening the letter was, that it had been dropped into the letter box without any direction, and that he opened it to discover where it should be sent; and, having read it and found out its treasonable contents, he gave it to the public to expose the character of the writer. It seems that the head of the Post-Office had not the subtlety of reasoning power to enable him to distinguish between the guilt of the letter-writer and the honesty of his deputy, and so allowed him to retain his responsible position.

According to the testimony of mail agents who were lately examined in New-Orleans, the Government does not actually authorize them to open letters, but rather likes the practice when any political intelligence of an important nature can be gained by it. Mr. GEORGE WHITMAN, a mail agent, gave the interesting information that he had consulted the Department in regard to the opening of letters, and that they did not approve of it, "but they wanted it." The Department, it seems from the testimony of this official, does not give any special authority to agents to open letters "to learn the secrets of politicians," but the Department "winks at it."

Politicians will doubtless profit by these revelations of Post-Office management, and be more guarded in their communications hereafter, when entrusting them to the tender care of mail agents. If such practices are "winked at" at the South, they are probably treated with similar leniency at the North; but looking at the stringency of the law in respect to violations of the mail, we do not see how these winked-at employés of the Postmaster General are to escape the punishment which their prying practices subject them to. Judge MCCALEB, in his charge to the Grand Jury of New-Orleans, said with great propriety:

"The law, gentlemen, draws no distinction between individuals, and I have no hesitation in saying that the moment that an agent of the Post Office Department, or any other person, dares to violate the sanctity of private correspondence, by opening a letter once entrusted to the custody of a Post-Office, no matter for what purpose, he is guilty of an offence in the eye of the law, and renders himself subject to the penalties which that law has prescribed. It would be strange indeed if any person should, under the pretext or for the purpose of detecting a crime, be permitted to perpetrate with impunity another crime equally infamous and equally forbidden by the law."

In consequence of Judge MCCALEB's charge, and the disclosures made by Mr. WHITMAN, warrants were issued for the arrest of the latter gentleman, and for Mr. D. P. BLAIR, another mail agent. Mr. WHITMAN happened to be out of the way, but Mr. BLAIR was arrested for opening letters contrary to the laws of the United States, and gave bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury. The real culprit in the case, however, is not Mr. BLAIR nor Mr. WHITMAN, nor any other employé of the Post-Office, but the head of the Department himself, or whoever he may be who "winks at" such outrages.

The Post-Office might be made a most beneficent institution; but, as it is now managed, it is a costly incumbrance upon the Government, a source of unimaginable political corruption, and an obstacle to private enterprise. Bad as it must of necessity be, while used as a political machine for the benefit of the party in power, and as a means of taxing the private correspondence of the people for the cost of conveying public documents and the letters of members of Congress and Government officials, it might still be rendered of much greater benefit to the nation by the adoption of the English system of orders, which would insure the safe transmission of money, and by greater facilities of delivery in the larger towns and cities of the Union.

The Post-Office difficulties in New-Orleans have happened in a good time to attract the attention of the public to abuses which have long existed in the Department, and the Government should take steps to clear itself of the imputation of such charges as were implied by the confessions of its authorized agents.

☞ The Know-Nothings at Philadelphia, it will be seen, make haste very slowly. Yesterday was spent in vain attempts to come to some agreement on the Slavery question. One proposition, according to our correspondent, was to ignore the subject altogether. That might possibly answer the purpose in Convention, but it would hardly answer at the polls. The Convention seems to be sensible of this fact, and does not, therefore, regard the scheme with special favor. After an exciting night session on the platform our correspondent states that the majority (Pro-Slavery) report has been carried.

Meantime, a Convention of Know-Somethings is in session at Cleveland. It is composed of those in various States who were driven from the Know-Nothing ranks by the ultra, proscriptive, Pro-Slavery Third Degree movements of the party during the last Winter. This new organization will create a powerful diversion in the ranks in several of the most important States. We have by telegraph a brief summary of the first day's proceedings of this Convention.

Neal Dow's Defence.

In another column will be found a communication from the Mayor of Portland to the Common Council, in explanation and defence of his course, in ordering the military to fire upon the mob. While it presents a stronger picture of the violence of the assembled crowd than we have elsewhere seen, we confess it does not change the opinion we have already expressed of the Mayor's action on the occasion. We do not find in it any conclusive and satisfactory evidence that the passions of the mob had risen to such a height as to justify the discharge of firearms upon them. Indeed Mr. Dow bases his justification in good degree upon the averment, that he had "learnt from undoubted sources that the mob spirit had been gathering form and force for a month before it broke out," and that, "if that infuriated mob had accomplished their first object, they would have become mad on the liquors of the agency, then setting fire to the remainder, would have destroyed the City Hall—for that purpose was avowed—then none but God can know how far their passions would have driven them."

Certainly, into grave a matter as this, Mr. Dow should have sought the grounds of his action, not in imaginary pictures of what might happen, but in the actual state of facts before him.

We learn from the Portland Advertiser that at Mr. Dow's request, a Committee of twenty-one citizens has been appointed to investigate the circumstances of the riot and report them to the public. This is a very proper proceeding, and will afford the basis of a more accurate judgment in the case than can be found from any materials yet accessible. No one accuses Mr. Dow of any intentional wrong; the absurd stories of his having bought the liquor with a view to personal profit, &c., &c., were the mere inventions of his enemies, and were at once exploded. But there is ground for believing that he acted rashly and wrongfully—from excitement or a failure to appreciate on the instant the importance of the steps which he ordered to be taken. It may be that a more full and unprejudiced statement of the facts will relieve him from even this reproach. The report of the Committee of Investigation, we trust, will give us such a statement.

Marketmen and Middlemen.

There are very few people, we say again, apart from those whose business brings them in direct contact with the market, who have any idea of what those great depôts of meat and vegetables are, whence the inhabitants of the City obtain their daily dinners. A very wholesome discussion is going on just now, in the public prints, in reference to the subject of markets and middle men, occasioned by the complaints of the market gardeners against the hucksters or forestallers, which may lead to some reform in our market-management which will be beneficial to the people. The great market of the City, at present, is the Washington market, occupying the space between Fulton and Vesey and Washington and West streets, which, at the time it was built, was much further from the centre of population than the Crystal Palace now is. The Washington market is a huddle of decaying old sheds, low, ricketty, unsightly, tumble-down, overcrowded, filthy and inconvenient; the cellars are occupied as restaurants, the sidewalks are encumbered with all manner of small dealers in confectionery, cheap crockery, green vegetables, oranges, hosiery, shoes, jewelry, poultry, pigs, &c.; the occupants of the stalls in the main building are equally heterogeneous, but a considerable number of them are butchers. As the demand for room has greatly exceeded the original accommodations of the market, space has been created by filling in the river in front, and by the construction of long piers or wharves, which are occupied chiefly by the dealers in fruits and vegetables, who have erected temporary huts, or shanties, in which are stored immense quantities of all the products of our fields and farm-yards. To a stranger who has had no experience of such traffic, the long vista of vegetable stores, the heaps of turnips, the mountains of potatoes, the pyramidal accumulations of radishes, the bulwarks of onions and crates of strawberries, would be an astonishing spectacle. But what would create more astonishment than all would be the dirt and filth, the dust, the broken street, the utter want of order, the absence of all attempt to preserve a decency of exterior, or even to give to the articles exposed for sale an inviting appearance. We doubt if there be another City in the world that can present a more disgusting, or a less attractive market place than our great metropolis, of whose elegant appearance, vast wealth, and commercial enterprise, we are all so fond of boasting.

It ought to be a sufficient argument against interference in commercial traffic, except for the purposes of a revenue, that the only place provided by the City, and leased to individuals for the sale of merchandise, is just the most filthy, demoralized, ill-regulated and offensive within the limits of our Corporation jurisdiction. All other classes of traders contrive to manage their affairs in a very admirable manner, without any aid from the Corporation; the merchants have their magnificent Exchange; the grocers have their spacious stores; the stockbrokers provide themselves with their own place of business; the flour and grain dealers have their Corn Exchange; the dry goods importers, jobbers and retailers, the hardware dealers, the coal merchants, the auctioneers and other trades, contrive to take care of themselves; and we know of no good reason why dealers in potatoes and asparagus should not do the same. A comparison of our public and private markets will not be likely to create any feelings in favor of the former. But a great outcry has been made by the market gardeners, and we have been surprised that some of our cotemporaries have countenanced their complaints, because the City will not furnish them with room, for a shilling a day, where they can come in from the country and dispose of their produce without being compelled to employ the services of a middleman, huckster, or "Commission agent." It is said that they are entitled to all the ground west of the Market, which is now occupied by the shanties of the vegetable dealers, who, through the connivance of the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, have illegally usurped the places which belong to the Long Island and New-Jersey farmers. We do not know how this may be, but we should say that the commission agents or middle-men might be very easily ejected, if they have no right there. But whether they have or have not, is of very little consequence; the only thing to be considered is, whether or not it will be for the benefit of the people to provide a market-place for the dealers in meats, fruits and vegetables, to dispose of their articles. Our own opinion of the matter is, that market gardeners should be allowed the same privileges that are accorded to all other people who come here to dispose of their merchandise, and nothing more. The middlemen are a very useful class of citizens, and we doubt if the profit they make be half as large as the extra charge which the producers of our vegetables would impose, if they dealt directly with the consumers.

Alderman BRIGGS, of New-York, at length pretty well known by name, has sued the publishers of the NEW-YORK TIMES for libel.—Albany Atlas.

Oh, no, he hasn't. He has only made affidavit before Justice WOOD, that he wants the Grand Jury to indict us; and we told the Judge that whenever they should do so, we would be on hand. That's all that has been done so far; and we suspect Sebastopol will be taken before the matter goes any further.

IMPORTANT FROM HAVANA.

Banishment of Felix—Abolition of Slavery in Cuba—The Island to be Placed Under the Protection of Great Britain.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Monday, June 4, 1855.

The United States war steamer Princeton, Commander EAGLE, will leave this morning for New-York.

J. H. FELIX, Esq., was shipped on board of a vessel bound for Spain two days since, to go thence to Ceuta to serve his sentence, unless met by the Queen's clemency at Madrid. It has been confidently asserted that he would be released here, so that I very much doubt, with the want of action on the part of the United States, if he finds any relief in Spanish mercy.

The rumors for some time past in our midst begin to assume tangible and palpable conditions; and there is now no doubt but that the intention is seriously entertained to procure the abolition of Slavery in Cuba, and put the Island under the protection of Great Britain, in order to avoid more serious evil which is being in course of cultivation, under the policy of Gen. JOSE DE LA CONCHA—sure to inure, but with a civil sacrifice of the white population.

The United States will not be consulted in the matter by those who represent Creole interests in the affair, because they have no confidence in the present administration, or its adherence to any given line that it may assume. The influence of the Abolitionists of England will settle the Cuba question, and Mr. PIERCE may as well withdraw his farcical Gulf drama before people begin to suspect that they have no business here.

Health good; a few cases of sickness on board Princeton—nothing serious; business of last week, active; exchange, New-York, 2¼ to 2 discount; London, 9 ⅌ cent. prem.

The Appointment of Court Clerks.

Yesterday afternoon the Board of Aldermen met in Convention at their Chambers, and proceeded to appoint four additional Clerks for the Civil and Criminal Courts of our City, in accordance with the provisions of the State law. His Honor the Mayor, and every Democratic Alderman, according as we understand the Caucus arrangement, failed to attend the Convention. There was a quorum present, notwithstanding, as the following members of the Board appeared in their seats, and constituted a majority of the twenty-two Aldermen and the Mayor, who was duly notified eight days prior to the meeting. Those present were:

Aldermen WILLIAMSON, (Second Ward.) MOSER, (Third Ward,) FOX, (Seventh Ward,) WM. TUCKER, (Eighth Ward,) VOORHIS, (Ninth Ward,) WARRMAN, (Twelfth Ward,) BRIGGS, (Thirteenth Ward,) CHRISTIE, (Sixteenth Ward,) ELY, (Seventeenth Ward,) LORD, (Eighteenth Ward,) C. H. TUCKER, (Twentieth Ward,) and DRAKE, of the (Twenty-second Ward.)

On motion, Alderman CHRISTIE, of the Sixteenth Ward, was chosen President of the Convention, and DAVID T. VALENTINE as Secretary. The object of meeting in Convention being set forth, a resolution was offered by Alderman WILLIAMSON to appoint the said clerks all together.

Alderman LORD called for a division, which was carried, and they were then separately elected in the following order:

For the Seventh Judicial District Court, held at the corner of Eighty-sixth-street and Fourth-avenue, JNO. L. AMELEE, of Harlem, was duly appointed. The next vote taken resulted in the unanimous election of WM. H. CANNIFF, Esq., as Clerk of the Second District Police Court, in place of WM. S. DAVISON, Esq., who was recently elected Judge of said Court. This appointee has been connected with the Daily Press of New-York City, for several years, and is, in every way, fully competent to fill the important post to which he has been assigned.

When the name of JAMES M. BYRNES was called, for Clerk of the New-York Police Court (Fourth District,) an objection to him was made by Alderman LORD, who made a motion to substitute the name of E. L. KNAPP, a policeman at the Court of Sessions. It was finally voted down, and the question being taken on Mr. BYRNES, he received only eleven votes, Alderman LORD voting in the negative, which was not a majority, therefore his appointment was considered lawful.

On motion, the action in regard to Mr. BYRNES was reconsidered, and Alderman LORD moved to insert the name of WILSON SMALLEY, but it was not favorably received.

The fourth and last candidate was JOHN QUINN, Esq., of the Sixteenth Ward, who received a majority vote, and was declared duly elected as one of the Clerks of the Fourth District Police Court.

It was then moved by Alderman ELY that such Clerk elected be furnished with a certificate of the appointment, to be signed by the President and Secretary of the Convention.

Carried unanimously.

On motion of Alderman DRAKE, the Convention now rose, to meet again subject to the call of the President.

Mr. President BARKER was absent from the Convention, which he said, on entering, he regretted exceedingly. He explained his position in the matter, when arriving at the Board of Aldermen, shortly after the Convention had adjourned. He had visited a sick relative at Staten Island, and was belated on his way home by the steamer leaving him.

Politics.

The Democrats are hard at work completing their Ward organizations. A meeting of the Sixth was held last evening at Knickerbocker House, in the Seventh Ward. The great political mastodon of Tammany Hall, Capt. RYNDERS, was present to assist in the regulating of matters there. The Ward Committee was appointed, which is, with little changes the same as last year. The Sixths are doing the work just now,—the question, Harvey and talk comes afterwards.

ALEXANDER DUMAS' GREAT WORK.
PUBLISHED THIS DAY,
THE CONSCRIPT;
A TALE OF THE EMPIRE.
BY ALEXANDER DUMAS.
In one beautiful 12mo. vol. of over 400 pp. Price, $1.
Since the appearance of "The Count of Monte Cristo," the author has written no work equal to this in brilliancy and power. It is essentially a story of peasant life. All the phases of existence in the cottage homes of France, the domestic misery produced by the conscription, and the terrors of the dreadful campaign of the first invasion of France, terminating in the first occupation of Paris by the Allies; the terrible battles in the East of France, and the arrival of Napoleon like a thunderbolt to disturb the brief triumph of Absolutism, are most graphically portrayed. Since de Saintine and Chateaubriand's romances, nothing superior has been written in the French language.
EDITORIAL OPINIONS.
From the Commercial Advertiser.
The present work is quite worthy of the translator's remark, "Dumas is always Dumas." "Monte Cristo" this is one of the most chaste and at the same time most interesting romances which have been printed in the French language. The original title was "Diego de Diable; Conscience l'innocent; but the translator has taken the liberty to give the story a more popular title, which, if not more appropriate, is more consistent with American ideas of propriety. No novel of greater power to attract and retain attention has been laid on our table for some time, and we can commend it unreservedly to all who have leisure to read for amusement.
From the Charleston Mercury.
The story is cast in the most romantic of all the author's productions. Taking the Empire of Napoleon as it is hovering on the verge of its final catastrophe, it exhibits the terrible exactions of war on the peasantry in their extremest form. The characters are lively, but full of interest.
From the Home Journal.
Apart from its purely literary merits, the story is especially commendable for being entirely free from that moral taint which, too often corrupts French fiction. The scene of the tale lies chiefly in a French village during the last years of Bonaparte's reign, and the actors are not by all of the recent illustrious example, corrupt characters—drawn with the skill of a true artist, the shouting in unison of rural and civil life. It presents a most delightful picture of rural life in France. The volume is full of incident and adventure.
From the New-York Weekly Dispatch.
The title sufficiently explains the pathetic and exciting character of the story. The scenes are laid in France at an intensely anxious period, viz., towards the close of the career of the great Napoleon—commencing when his star had begun to decend, and ending with the wreck and ruin of Waterloo. This work will be read with interest, as are all the books of this fascinating and distinguished master of fiction.
From the Hartford Courant.
This novel of the prolific French author is, as usual, exciting and extremely interesting. It describes the life of a conscript under the Empire of Napoleon, and is a good picture of the period.
From the New-York Tribune.
It is free from the coarse features which vitiate so large a portion of the lighter French literature, and may safely be recommended for family reading.
From the Cleveland Plaindealer
"The Conscript" is a novel marked on every page with the characteristics of the great writer. It is a story of the times of the great Napoleon, and full of interesting incidents connected with the camp and battle-field.
From the Sunday Atlas
It was received with marked favor on its first appearance, and by the more chaste and discriminating minds, was considered equal, and in some respects superior to any of his previous works. The translator has rendered the original with vigor.
From the Bridgeport Standard.
The routine life of French peasantry; the life of the humble soldier in the field; (Also where he is rarely described) the life of the Emperor are beautifully illustrated in the masterly manner for which the author is so celebrated. The whole book sustains and teaches a morality which will go far to remove the wholesale imputations sometimes cast on French novels and their morality.

[illegible]

At the opening of the Supreme Court of Suffolk County a week or two since, and again at Westhampton Course, at White Plains, on the 6th inst., Judge Strong delivered a charge to the Grand Jury on the Prohibitory Liquor Law. "He informed them that notwithstanding that the selling of strong and spirituous liquor was a violation of the law, except as provided in the law of last Winter, the same as the selling previous to the 1st of May last, and liable to the same punishments and penalties. It was clearly, until the 4th of July, when the Prohibitory Law goes into full effect, a misdemeanor, and indictable as such. Ale, however, he maintained, did not fall within the category of strong drink, and its sale was not therefore illegal."

At the Suffolk opening the Judge delivered a similar charge, as it was the last occasion that the Court was to be held in the venerable old Court House. He outlined the history of the building, and the most notable scenes that had occurred within it, with the feeling of one who had contributed largely to make its history. The new Court House of Suffolk, at Riverhead, was occupied for the first time last week.

Look Out for Your Bedfellow.

An instance of the necessity of looking out for your bedfellow before you go to sleep is found in the present case. JOHN BROWN, a seaman, about thirty-four years of age, was brought before Justice COMMANS, yesterday, on the complaint of JERRY LEARY, who hails from Tennessee, charging him with stealing $27 50, under the following circumstances: LEARY had taken up lodgings at the boarding house, No. 50 Greenwich-street, having for a bedfellow the accused, JOHN BROWN. On going to bed he put his pocket book, containing the above amount of money, in his bosom, between his skin and under-shirt. About 3 or 4 o'clock he awoke and missed his pocket-book, and listening a few minutes he heard BROWN jingling money in his hand. LEARY then struck a light, when the accused dropped the pocket-book in the bed, but when he opened it, by some legerdemain, the pocket-book was lightened of the money.

He immediately demanded the money from BROWN, who said that he would give him fifteen dollars if he would say nothing about it. LEARY told him where he would see him first,—before he would take the fifteen dollars. He didn't like to receive, as it were, his own money as a compliment. At any rate, he didn't feel inclined to be put under obligations. LEARY threatened to do him up brown if he would not fork over the whole amount. BROWN refused and struck complainant over the head with a chair, and threatened to take his life if he would say anything about it. The question was summarily disposed of by LEARY calling for help, when the police arrived and took BROWN into custody. The accused was committed by the magistrate to answer in default of $500.

Cricket, St. George's vs. Philadelphia Clubs.

The above Clubs commenced their game yesterday at Hoboken. St. George's played two innings and scored 91 and 106. Philadelphia 55 and 31 with the loss of 3 wickets. This morning at 12 they resume play and have 112 runs to get off 7 wickets, so that the game does not look very encouraging. There was some good play and the ground was well filled with spectators from all parts numbering near 3,000. We shall give full scores at the close of the match.

☞ On Monday night Rev. Dr. BAIRD gave a lecture on Russia, Turkey, and the War in Europe, at Astoria, which was heard with much interest by a large audience. It will be seen, from the advertisement in another column, that he gives this lecture tonight at Jersey City, at the request of many gentlemen of influence in that place.

☞ The Aldermen give us $4,000 worth of celebration on the 4th. It is—let us be thankful—all to be taken out in fireworks, &c.—no crackers and cannon to frighten a squeezing crowd, nor lemonade to give the folks the colic.

☞ Butter is falling. The best can be had at ten shillings. Beefsteaks are a cent less per pound than last week. Eggs are as cheap as can be expected. Vegetables are coming plenty, and the times are mellowing all around.

☞ Our report of the Complimentary Dinner to J. HOWARD SMITH, Esq., late United States Consul to Syria and Palestine, which took place last night in the St. Nicholas Hotel, is unavoidably crowded out.

☞ Then was an duel reported yesterday! The Boston think that the fever which first broke out in the Shakspeare Club House won't spread any further.

Mayor's Office.

A considerable amount of business was transacted at the Mayor's Office yesterday.

CHARGE AGAINST AN AUCTIONEER.

The annexed affidavit, embracing a singular charge against an auctioneer, was made before Justice OSBORNE, at the Mayor's Office, yesterday:

DANIEL S. LARKIN, of No. 206 Centre-street, being duly sworn, deposed and said that on the 3d day of May, 1855, he engaged the firm of WATERS & McCARTHY, auctioneers, of No. 26 Catharine-street, to come to deponent's house to sell a quantity of household furniture.

Deponent further says, that at the time of the sale on said day, RICHARD WATERS, one of said firm, acted as the auctioneer, and during the sale of the goods he, the said WATERS, repeatedly refused to take the bids offered by various bona fide bidders, and took the bids of several persons instead, when the said WATERS had procured to be in attendance as under-bidders, and knocked goods down to said persons at half price, thereby cheating and defrauding deponent of the sum of $25 and upwards.

Deponent further says that he afterwards saw the goods knocked down at half-price by said WATERS to said under-bidders, at the auction store of the said firm, where they were sold the following week at a great advance upon the price which they had previously brought, and deponent himself offered an advance of 100 per cent. on a portion of said goods, over and above what deponent had received for them at his sale.

The accused was held to bail in the sum of $500.

THOSE DOGS AGAIN.

JOHN KELLY, of No. 672 Ninth-avenue, writes to the Mayor that on Ninth-avenue, from Fiftieth to Fifty-third streets, there are not less than one hundred and fifty dogs kept by Germans, for the purpose of hauling rag carts, and last week no less than three of these dogs went mad, and were shot by the neighbors, but before one of them was killed he bit a young heifer, belonging to a poor, industrious man in Fifty-first-street—that she (the heifer) went mad the next day, and they had to kill her on Sunday night.

THE LOTTERY BUSINESS.

J. W. K. ROBINSON, of Cincinnati, informs the Mayor by letter, that a firm, whose office is in Wall-street, New-York, are sending a newspaper called the Golden Age all over the Western States; and that said papers contain schemes of lotteries that profess to draw by the Delaware lotteries, with prizes of $20,000 and $30,000—tickets only $2. He thinks the whole concern is a humbug, and hopes the villains will be arrested, as they are swindling the people of the Western States out of thousands of dollars.

ELIJAH TAYLOR, of No. 20 Amity-place, writes to the Mayor: "That the Fifteenth Ward is certainly the worst managed Ward in the City, as far [illegible] Ward be must be a [illegible] act [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Sunday night.

[illegible] Mr. O. C. S. Bailey, and at the time above referred to was, and now is, held by me, with the consent of Mr. BAILEY, as security for money loaned over twenty months ago. The ring was obtained, and is now held by me, in no other way or manner and for no other purpose. The matter has been satisfactorily explained and the complaint withdrawn.

JAMES FERGUSON, No. 68 Greenwich-street.

A Card from Madame Restell.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

As the Tribune has not the manliness to insert the following Card in refutation of an article false in every particular, which it published, the undersigned requests its insertion in your columns:

To the Editors of the Tribune:

GENTLEMEN—An some contemptible and cowardly scoundrel, under the assumed name and address of "E. Oliphant, Barclay-street Hotel, 81 Barclay-street," has succeeded in imposing a pretended complaint of a most malignant character upon the "Mayor's Book," which of course is eagerly and greedily seized upon and spread out before the public in the columns of the Tribune, in editorial display, will you have the fairness to do me the justice of inserting this Card equally conspicuously, to enable me to state that after the most diligent and industrious search and inquiry no such person as "E. Oliphant" is to be found, ever been known or ever been heard of, either at No. 81 Barclay-street or elsewhere; that there is no such name in the Directory, and that there is no longer even such a hotel as the "Barclay-street Hotel," and that the pretended complaint is a base fraud.

That my counsel has called upon the Mayor to acquaint him with the imposition, that the slight reparation of exposing the fraud practiced may be rendered.

May I not suggest in conclusion, whether the basest coward of me upon every possible occasion, upon the slightest pretext, or no pretext, is not cowardly and ungentlemanly. Cowardly, because I am a woman, and those attacking me are supposed to be men. Cowardly, because they have an immense and crushing engine of power, subject to their will and control, which I have not; and ungentlemanly, because no gentleman will thus take unfair advantage.

Yours, respectfully,

MADAME RESTELL.

LONG ISLAND.

Washington Park, Brooklyn.

Washington Park, better known as "Fort Greene," it is gratifying to state, is nearer completion now than last year, a fact well worthy of notice, when its history is considered. The deep gullies made by the heavy rains of last Winter, which poured in torrents down its slopes, have been filled up, and to prevent future damage from this source, paved water-courses have been constructed, so inviting and natural that the aqueous element passes off without an effort, and without injury to the grounds. The attempts made last year to form a sod over the entire surface in the [illegible] way, by the sowing of seed, has failed, as was predicted at the time by some, for [illegible] a process for this progressive and progressing age, and the more modern and expeditious plan of laying sod already formed, has been resorted to for the present season, which not only adds much to the beauty of the Park, but will aid very materially in protecting the washing away of the ground by the element that proved so destructive to its beauty the past season.

Besides the improvements already named, numerous serpentine and curving graveled paths, up hill and down, around and across hill and dale, have been formed, trees and shrubbery have been set out, so that the place already presents a much improved appearance—the state it should have been in years ago. When perfected, this will be one of the most magnificent Parks in the country. From its consecrated heights, an excellent view can be had of Jersey, the Highlands, the Bay, River, and Islands, New-York, and Brooklyn, and it will undoubtedly prove to be an agreeable and useful place of resort at no distant day.

Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association.

The regular monthly meeting of this Association was held on Tuesday evening, in the lecture room of the Pilgrim Church, on which occasion, after the usual opening exercises, ALEXANDER WATSON, Esq., late of the Albany Female and Kinderhook Academies, now of Brooklyn, delivered an essay on "Authority and Reason." The production was an able one, and the large and intelligent audience present testified their appreciation of this effort, by unanimously requesting a copy of the essay for publication. This Society is moving along quietly, and its prosperity and usefulness are increasing continually.

Larceny.

WEDNESDAY, June 13—P. M.

The money and market advices by the steamer Atlantic, at this port from Liverpool, June 2, are the most interesting and exciting we have had from the other side for very many months. The rise of one cent, a pound on Cotton, with sales of 132,400 bales in a single week, is an event that scarcely occurs once in ten years; particularly after five weeks of previous excitement in the same great staple. The trade at Manchester appear to be fully up to the spirit of the Liverpool market, and again took 65,000 bales. The deliveries to the trade, for consumption, have averaged weekly, since the 1st January last, 49,530 bales, against 35,000 to the corresponding period last year. This gives a total of 1,073,000 bales in five months, a quantity wholly unprecedented in the previous history of the Cotton manufacture, in time of peace or war. The corresponding deliveries last year were 750,000 bales. The stock of American on the 1st June stood 341,000 bales, against 276,000 last year. The stock of all descriptions 618,000 bales, against 509,000 bales last year. The amount of Cotton then known to be at sea was comparatively light, while the stock in the American ports to-day is only 170,000 bales, against 467,000 bales this time last year. How much further the speculation is to be carried, may be judged, in some measure, by these figures. It is stated that the trade at Manchester are unable to command prices for Goods to correspond with present prices, but are doing well with Yarns. There was no appearance of a let-up to the excitement the day the Atlantic sailed, and the probability is the next arrival will report another advance. Orleans fair is quoted 7¾d., and Orleans middling 6 11-16d. The crop weather in England was so checkered as to keep the prices of Grain pretty steady, but speculation in Wheat was not active, and Flour was neglected. Indian Corn continues to be taken freely, and 6d. is added to the quotations by this arrival. American Provisions in good request; Bacon 2s.@3s. dearer the cwt.; Beef and Pork both firm. The Iron interest was looking better for manufacturers; Rails have gone up to £6 15s.@£7. In London the Money market shows increased ease, which is gradually helping all branches of business in the province, and lending improved activity to the shipping interest. The arrivals of Gold for the fortnight were nearly or quite $8,000,000. Much of it goes directly into the Bank of England, the last report of which exhibits a total Specie reserve of $85,320,000, an increase for the week of $2,085,000, counting in round numbers the £ Sterling at $5. Bank Discounts were still kept at 4 ⅌ cent., though the private houses were underbidding for paper, and the Bank was making temporary use of its means on Consols and Railway debentures at 3¼@4 ⅌ cent. This, and the general ease of Money, had induced considerable speculation in the English Railways, and the feeling had extended to four or five of the prominent American Railway Loans. Illinois Centrals and Erie '75's had been done 2 ⅌ cent. higher than previous figures; Panamas at 93, ex dividend, equal to 95½, and Pennsylvania Centrals at a corresponding advance, and much wanted. The market had been well cleared of first-class Bonds. New-York Central 7's quoted as high as 96. Mr. SATTERTHWAITE writes:

"The same causes which have, during the past week, stimulated purchases of Consols and English Railway Stocks at an advance of 2 to 2 ⅌ cent., have at length produced an effect upon American Securities, the market for which is decidedly better. For the most current descriptions of Railroad Bonds there is an active demand, at an advance of 1 to 2 ⅌ cent, and very few first class Bonds are offering. The favorable progress making in the sale of lands belonging to the Illinois Central Company, has induced many purchases of these Bonds to be made, both Construction and Free Land; the former have touched 70. Pennsylvania 6 ⅌ cents. are much wanted, and 91 would be freely paid. Erie 1869 are buyers at 85. Erie Sinking Funds have been done at 81. Great Western of Canada Shares are firm at 21½. The demand for this Company's Bonds still continues."

Wall-street was quite enlivened by the Foreign news. The great rise in Cotton and Consols—the latter, we should have mentioned above, had touched 92¾—divided attention with the stirring events in the East, which are looked upon as turning the scale of War in favor of the Allies. Our home affairs, particularly the crops and the position of the Banks, looking well, the Stock Market readily responded to the favorable tenor of the English accounts, and by far the heaviest day's business of the season was done at the Brokers' Board. The list of sales add up 20,500 shares and $370,000 bonds; prices advancing from ¾ to 1½ ⅌ cent. on the already buoyant tone established yesterday. The leading shares were Reading and Erie, and the most prominent movement in bonds was in Illinois Centrals, which reached 81½ cash. State Stocks were firm, but no large parcels offered at the bids. The Western Road shares were wanted at a further advance of ¾ or 1 ⅌ cent.; Michigan Southern brought 104, and the Construction Scrip of the Company par; Michigan Central sold at 97, an advance in a few days of 7 ⅌ cent. Cleveland and Columbus sold at 108. The traffic of five months of this Company has just been made up preliminary to the July dividend, which will be 5 ⅌ cent. in cash. They are as follow:

CLEVELAND AND COLUMBUS RAILROAD.

	Receipts five months.		Expenses four months.
	1854.	1855.	1854.	1854.
January	$72,529	$92,829	$32,480	$30,938
February	76,928	74,174	29,574	45,473

April	105,189	107,867	46,004	32,515
May	97,173	97,774	.....	.....
	$456,650	$480,636	$174,474	$155,552

Gross earnings five months	$480,636
Expenses four months	$165,852
Estimated for May	40,000
	205,552
Net profit five months	$275,074

More than equal by $50,000 to the full six months dividend of 5 ⅌ ct. The Funded debt of the Company is only $96,000, which would be paid off if the Bonds could be reached. The net profit on the stock appears to be about 1 ⅌ ct. a month, or 12 ⅌ ct. a year, with a reserve for contingencies equal to $100,000 a year.

The steamer Pacific sailed at noon with a heavy mail and $1,674,000 Gold. Exchange closed 110@110¼ on London. The packet to-day brought lower prices for American Gold Eagles in London, and to meet the decline, the Bankers here, who draw against Specie, may have to change their terms a small fraction as against future shipments. Money continues easy. The large speculative business at the Stock Board may impart a little more activity to demand loans, though it is scarcely apparent yet. Good paper is not abundant, and the Banks absorb nearly all that offers of strictly first-class. The reports to-day were less favorable, though still very contradictory, about the rise in the Southern Rivers and the prospect of getting out Cotton. The growing crop of Cotton is understood to look better than a fortnight ago. The planting, however, this season, has not been increased, owing to the increased attention paid by the planters to Indian Corn. The movement of the old crop, to the present date, is thus reported in the weekly circular of W. P. WRIGHT:

	Season.		Week.
	1855.	1854.	1855.	1854.
Receipts at the ports	$2,304,000	$2,711,000	$26,000	$38,000

The flag of the Merchants' Exchange was at half-mast to-day as a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. W. S. UNDERHILL, (of JACOB LITTLE & Co.,) the Secretary of the Exchange Company. Mr. U. was buried to-day.

The British Trade Reports for the month of April appear in our files by the Atlantic. They show a decided revival in the Export values of the Kingdom, the aggregate being more than equal, by $1,415,000, to the same month last year. The falling off, however, in the previous two months makes the quarterly aggregate less by $21,770,000 than the first quarter of 1854. The figures are:

	For April.	For three months.
1855	$35,570,000	$118,190,000
1854	34,155,000	140,000,000

From the Albany Evening Journal.

BANK BIOGRAPHY.—Mr. A. B. JOHNSON, an intellectual Banker, has written a Biography of the Ontario Bank at its Utica Branch, of which latter institution Mr. J. is President. HENRY R. GIBSON, of Canandaigua, and Mr. JOHNSON, of Utica, have been the Financial Officers of the Mother and Branch from the year 1819. These Banks have paid 7 ⅌ cent. dividends to their Stockholders, contributed $55,000 to the Safety Fund, and as:

The first day of January to, however, many, and our entire capital of five hundred thousand dollars will, on that day, be returned to the owners on demand.

"Who—There is your crown;
And he who wears the crown immortally,
Long guided it yours!"

Neither institution having a defaced dict or one of doubtful solvency or unmanageable magnitude; and has either lost any such debt for the past year. In fact, the total losses of both offices during the entire forty years of our existence, have not cost them only nothing; including forgeries, over-drafts, frauds, or accidents of any kind. Our success I at-

[illegible] to have attributed to banking in its true and simple sense. To prove it, we can say each year, we have industriously attended to business on hand, and conducting no business on a [illegible] strong.

Messrs. JOHNSON and GIBSON, says the Utica Gazette, have conducted these institutions, the annual income of the former being $30,000 and that of the latter, $20,000.

Mr. JOHNSON pays a well deserved compliment to Jesse CHENE, Esq., one of Mr. GIBSON'S Directors, a man so distinguished for his public worth as for his social virtues.

Chinese Markets.

SHANGHAI, Saturday, April 7, 1855.

The Recapture of the city by the Imperialists has not been followed by much improvement in the demand for imports, which is by attributed to the troops being taken up for the conveyance of troops into the interior by the Mandarins; as well as to fresh political disturbances, in the consuming districts. EXCHANGE has been more favorable for sellers. A fair amount of business has been done in TEAS at prices which show but trifling change on our last quotations. SILK has been in more active demand, but holders have been disposed to realize, and a slight decline has been submitted to. The country around us remains quiet; from the North we have conflicting accounts of the outcomes and reverses of the Rebels; but nothing reliable, except the capture of Hankow by the Rebels. The steamer arrived on the 11th of March, bringing us dates from London to the 6th of January and from New-York to the 10th of December. Contrary to expectations our market for English Long CLOTHS continues inactive; the want of communication with the interior from the boats being taken by the Authorities to remove troops, &c.; and the disturbances still going on in the neighboring Provinces, have all tended to disappoint expectations of an improving demand consequent on the recapture of Shanghai by the Imperialists. Goods are held with some firmness, and our quotations are somewhat higher than last month. The transactions in GREY SHIRTINGS have again been principally in barter, and altogether we estimate the sales at about 60,000 pieces—8½-entry, $1 25; 8½ entry, $1 40; 7½-entry, $1 50@$1 65. The deliveries have probably amounted to 110,000 pieces, the Natives preparing for the new season operations. In other descriptions there is no material alteration either in price or demand. Our stock of American COTTON Goods have not increased since our last, but the demand has shown no improvement; and, as holders evince no abilities to realize, transactions have been trifling; 40 yards DRILLS are quoted at $12 piece. BROWN SHIRTINGS and JEANS remain as last advised. No sales, and quotations nominal.
